Gibson Pitches Cards To 3-1 Lead in Series

ST LOUIS—Bob Gibson pitched the St. Louis Cardinals into a commanding lead in the World Series yesterday by stifling the Boston Red Sox on five hits, 6-0.

The victory was the second straight for the Cardinals and their third in four games. The only man now standing between them and their eighth world championship is probably Jim Lonborg, who will pitch for Boston today against Steve Carlton.

There was little mystery and no suspense yesterday, as 54,575 persons watched on a dark cold day in Busch Memorial Stadium. The Cardinals overpowered Jose Santiago with six hits and four runs the first time they batted, added two runs two innings later and had a six-run lead with Gibson pitching—which meets most of the baseball definition of comfort.

They thereby thrust the Red Sox into a dismal corner, even for a 100-1 "Cinderella Team" that had won the American League pennant

Top Of The Morning

WEATHER

Temperatures will average much below normal for the next five days with daytime highs in the 50s and overnight lows in the 30s. Showers are expected today and again toward the end of the week. The sun rises today at 7:28 a.m. and sets at 6:49 p.m. Saturday's 7 a.m. report: high, 63; low, 39; no precipitation; river 9.5 ft. and falling. Sunday: high, 59; low 51; no precipitation; river 9.2 ft. and falling.

WARREN COUNTY

This past weekend marked the first annual Johnny Appleseed Festival at Sheffield. The list of winners of the many contests featured at the festival may be found on page 3.

THE NATION

The seven-week old, violence-ridden strike by steel hauling truckers has been spreading gradual economic disruption over the northeastern industrial complex. Steel operations were affected immediately, but now reports indicate other industries are feeling the strike's impact.

In another labor dispute, Walter P. Reuther, president of the United Automobile Workers Union, warned that if there was no progress in its bargaining with the Ford Motor Company within the next week or ten days, the strike against the auto manufacturer could last months.

THE WORLD

Three United States planes were shot down over North Vietnam as their bombardment of strategic targets continued. During the raids, Air Force jets destroyed six Russian-built helicopters on the ground in an area about 30 miles west of Hanoi.

A report in Portugal said a secret revolutionary organization of armed forces officers and ex-military men was preparing to step up its activities in the hopes of bringing off a coup against the regime of Premier Antonio de Oliveira Salazar.

SPORTS

Eisenhower High School held powerhouse Cassadaga Valley to a 21-7 victory Saturday on the Knights' gridiron. The Cougars scored on the last play from scrimmage to end the first half for a 14-0 lead, then added their final score late in the fourth period after Gary Dalrymple had edged the Knights to within seven points on a touchdown pass from Jamie Nesmith in the third stanza. Page 7.

Number two Houston and Texas Tech, the tenth ranked team, lost on Saturday to highlight action on the nation's college gridirons. USC, the number one team last week, and Notre Dame scored impressive victories in warmups for their clash this week. Page 8.

$5,000 Damage In Mishaps

Property damage was near $5,000 and at least one person was charged with a traffic violation in a rash of accidents in Warren County this past weekend.

Slack highways contributed to two accidents investigated by state police yesterday after a noon.

A car operated by Luella Graham, 62, Box 42, Conneaut Lake, skidded into the rear of a vehicle stopped at an intersection of two forest service roads in Mead Twp. The second vehicle was operated by James R. Trotta, 23, 18 Orchard dr., Poland, Ohio. Trotta's wife, Suzanne, 24, was taken to Warren General Hospital for examination and was released.

Lawrence E. Eaton, 66, 278 Dickey ave., Warren, Ohio, was attempting to pass another car on Rt. 59 seven miles east of Warren when his car skidded spun around and struck a guard rail.

A state highway sign and shrubbery along Rt. 62 north of Warren were damaged shortly after noon yesterday when a car operated by Richard Craig Peck, 17, 693 Fifth ave., Warren, ran off the road, went out of control and ran up an embankment.

State police reported a hit and run crash in Clarendon early yesterday morning when a car parked on Railroad st. was hit by a driver who left the scene. The parked car was in the care of Pearl Seth, 5 1/2 Railroad st.

Charges are pending against a Warren area youth who crashed into an embankment along Jackson st. ext. late Saturday night as he was pursued by a borough police car.

Investigating troopers identified the driver as Charles Joseph Cataldo, 16, 605 S. State st., North Warren, and his passenger as Cornelius Gallagher, 634 Beech st., Warren. Borough police were pursuing them following the crash.

Lost Hunters Find Way Out

Two hunters believed lost in the Chapel Fork area of the Allegheny Reservoir walked out of the woods Saturday afternoon two hours after a search for them was begun.

The men were identified as Gary Lee Cornelius, 23, and Jim Harper, 21, both of Grove City.

Trooper Max Camp of the Kane barracks said he started searching for them Friday night and was searching in the company of Wilbur Williams, fish warden from Mt. Jewett, and Cornelius' father. Saturday afternoon when the men returned to their car.

Williams said they left home last Tuesday and were to have returned home Thursday. State police were notified Friday by the parents of the hunters.

U.S., Germany to Unveil New Battle Tank Today

(c) N.Y. Times News Service WASHINGTON — A futuristic tank, with a low, flat silhouette and a gun capable of firing both missiles and artillery shells is to be unveiled today in the United States and West Germany after four years of joint development by the two countries.

Called the Main Battle Tank of the 1970's or MBT-70 for short, the armored vehicle has fallen about a year behind schedule. The tank is experiencing serious troubles with its principal weapons system, and development costs have risen so high that Germany is seeking modifications in the agreement under which the two nations have been proceeding on the project.

But American tank experts who are close to the program insist that, despite its problems, the MBT-70 will be the fastest, deadliest, most advanced armored combat vehicle ever devised and promises the allies a decided edge over Soviet armor.

The American pilot model, produced by General Motors, in Cleveland, is scheduled to go on display today outside the Sheraton Park Hotel here during the annual meeting of the Association of the United States Army. Germany is also expected to show its model to the German public today.

The MBT-70 is regarded with more than usual interest by top government officials because it represents the most ambitious effort to date by two nations to share equally the costs, technical know-how and management decisions in developing a major new weapons system.

If the experiment ultimately succeeds, it may well establish the pattern for other big joint development programs, and administration officials say.

Compared with the M-60, America's principal battle tank, the MBT-70, with a maximum speed of about 40 miles an hour, is about a third faster. It uses an automatic ammunition loader, thus cutting crew size from four to three. It has a chassis that can be raised and lowered about 15 inches, giving it better traction in mud and snow. Infrared and night-vision devices enable the gunner to see

Lord Attlee Is Dead At 84

(c) N.Y. Times News Service LONDON—Tributes poured in yesterday for Earl Attlee, who died of pneumonia early yesterday morning. He was 84 years old.

Lord Attlee, who became prime minister when the Labor Party swept to power in 1945 and led Britain through the social revolution which saw the birth of the welfare state, died at 6:10 a.m. at Westminster Hospital. A spokesman said "he died peacefully in his sleep following a relapse."

Lord Attlee entered the hospital on Sept. 8 for treatment of what was described as "a minor condition." A week later he developed pneumonia and after making some progress suffered the relapse. His only son and heir, Viscount Prestwood, was at the bedside when Lord Attlee died.

The body of Lord Attlee will be cremated. His ashes will be interred in Westminster Abbey at a memorial service provisionally set for Nov. 3, according to the dean of the Abbey, Dr. Eric Abbott.

"He never for a moment lost sight of his inspiring vision of a new Britain and a new world," Prime Minister Harold A. Wilson said in one of the many and bipartisan praises given Lord Attlee.

The Prime Minister, noting that the 84-year old Lord Attlee's record of public service spanned more than half a century said: "Through his intimate and lasting association with the problems of poverty and housing in London, through his long years as leader of the opposition, his great record as wartime deputy prime minister, and his historic premiership, he brought a quiet and modest greatness to our public affairs."

Wilson added that Lord Attlee would be remembered "internationally — for the historic decision to give India independence."

Edward Heath, leader of the Conservative Party, said that "as deputy to Sir Winston Churchill throughout the war, Lord Attlee displayed a loyalty and degree of political courage that earned him universal respect."

Heath added: "As prime minister after the war he secured his place in history. Faithful to his principles, skillful yet firm in his dealing with colleagues, he served his country with honesty and integrity."

U.S. Jets Strike Cat Bi Airfield For First Time

By GEORGE M. CARTHUR

Associated Press Writer SAIGON (AP) — For the first time in the war, U.S. Navy jets yesterday bombed the Cat Bi airfield near Haiphong that had been on the Pentagon's restricted list. Other warplanes ranged to within 15 miles of Red China to knock out a key bridge.

As the war over the North intensified, the Air Force also disclosed the Soviet Union is supplying to North Vietnam the world's largest operational helicopters. It said its planes Saturday destroyed on the ground two of the huge craft, capable of ferrying 120 troops or telephone-pole size anti-aircraft missiles.

In the ground war, heavy fighting involving U.S. paratroopers was reported in coastal lowlands 350 miles northeast of Saigon.

On the political scene, a Saigon newspaper reported a Buddhist nun burned herself to death yesterday in a Mekong Delta City—the second such immolation in the last week in support of militant Buddhists seeking a new government religious charter.

The raid on Cat Bi, a field capable of handling MIG interceptors, was carried out by U.S. carrier-based Navy jets. Pilots reported a secondary explosion set off by their bombs. Post strike photographs showed craters on the runway and parking area. A spokesman said buildings were destroyed and a small, propeller-driven utility aircraft was damaged.

There were no reports of MIG aircraft on the field. A U.S. spokesman said he had no recent photographs or reports of large numbers of MIGs at Cat Bi, but said the runway can accommodate the Russian-built jets.

Navy pilots also reported heavily cratering the center runway at Kien An airfield six miles southwest of Haiphong in another raid yesterday. The field was first attacked May 10 and has been hit several times since.

Marines Change Guard

By JOHN LENGEL

Associated Press Writer

CON THIEN, Vietnam (AP) — The Marines have changed the guard at Con Thien.

Those who left seemed cheerfully relieved.

They dug in yesterday to two beers each and a steak dinner at Dong Ha, 10 miles southeast of the miserable rise which commands the lowlands of the demilitarized zone.

But in the on-and-off drizzle at Con Thien, there was no reason to believe matters had changed.

It was quiet enough by Con Thien standards. There were only about 20 enemy mortar and recoilless rifle rounds. Guerrillas launched a minor ground probe outside the defense wire Saturday night.

But no one would predict the enemy's big guns were no longer capable of pouring in from 500 to 1,000 shells a day as they did during much of September.

Lt. Col. John Mitchell, of Portland, Ore., is the new commander at Con Thien. He led his element from the 9th Marine Regiment up 10,000 yards of dangerous muddy road from Cam Lo to the south.

Helmetless and dressed in a rain-slicker, he stood on the steps of his command bunker and said if he had any rules at all they would be for his men to keep well spread out, think and work fast and use common sense.

Mitchell had had a test of these rules yesterday morning while inspecting his outlying defenses under sporadic enemy mortar fire.

Thirty-four of his men have been wounded in their first three days here. The move-up was not announced earlier for security reasons. Fewer than 100 shells have hit each day. The force he relieved at Con Thien suffered 27 men killed and 620 wounded in 28 days. Many of the wounds were minor, and the figure included men who were wounded more than once.

Bi, the two major airfields in North Vietnam used by MIG interceptors are still on the Pentagon's restricted list. These are the untouched Phuc Yen airfield 15 miles north of Hanoi and Gia Lam, three miles east of the capital city and across the Red River from the main civil airfield.

Besides the disclosure of the big Soviet-made helicopters, the U.S. Command said a new Soviet-made flame thrower had been found with the body of a dead North Vietnamese trooper after an action in the northern zone of South Vietnam in which 15 Communists were killed.

The giant Soviet helicopters apparently were newly introduced into the North Vietnamese ranks. The Air Force identified them as the Mi6 and Mi4, known by Western military forces respectively as the Hook and the Hound.

The Soviet Union and North Vietnam signed a new aid agreement recently in which Kremlin leaders agreed to supply Hanoi's military forces with modern offensive and defensive weapons.

The Mi6 is the bigger of the two. It is 108 feet long. Aviation records show one Hook has

FARMER'S ALMANAC PREDICTS A BIG JANUARY SNOW STORM

DUBLIN, N.H. (AP) — The Farmer's Almanac, which is 108 years older than the U.S. Weather Bureau and sometimes more accurate, predicts the big January snow storm of 1967 will be repeated in 1968.

On the brighter side, the almanac's weather sage, who uses the pen name Abe Weatherwise, says next spring ought to come early and be sunny except for one major storm from Chicago to New England in late April.

The venerable almanac's 176th edition goes on sale today.

UAW Okays Hefty Hike In Emergency Union Dues

By A.F. MAHAN

DETROIT (AP) — A United Auto Workers convention yesterday approved a hefty emergency dues increase to bolster the union's strike fund, and Walter P. Reuther, UAW president, then predicted his union's strike against Ford Motor Co. Bi, but said the runway can accommodate the Russian-built jets.

Navy pilots also reported heavily cratering the center runway at Kien An airfield six miles southwest of Haiphong in another raid yesterday. The field was first attacked May 10 and has been hit several times since.

Malfunction Blamed For Mishap

JAMESTOWN, N.Y. — An apparent malfunction in the master traffic control system has been blamed for an accident in which three persons were sent to the hospital. The accident occurred at the intersection of Third st. and Prendergast ave. last night when a police car, operated by Patrolman Robert States, 20 Colfax st., collided with another auto operated by Luella Carlson, 515, 620 E. Sixth st., Jamestown.

Patrolman States was on way to the city line of E. Second st. to escort an emergency unit from Falconer to WCA Hospital. The patrolman had requested that all traffic lights be turned red in order that he might get through the downtown traffic quickly. A subsequent investigation by police revealed that the traffic light at Third and Prendergast did not turn red but remained in its normal cycle. Several witnesses told police the signal was green for northbound traffic on Prendergast ave. when the crash occurred.

Mrs. Carlson was admitted to WCA Hospital with fractures of both collar bones, a laceration of the head and contusions and abrasions. Patrolman States was released from Jamestown General Hospital following treatment for lacerations and minor sprains.

A passenger in the Carlson auto, Helen Carlson, 63, also of 620 E. Sixth st. was treated for contusions and abrasions before being released from WCA.

The emergency unit from Falconer which patrolman States was dispatched to escort was transporting Keith Nelson, 7, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Nelson, 18 Huff Hill rd., Falconer. He was hurt when he fell while riding his bicycle near his home. He was treated for minor injuries at WCA Hospital and later released.

U.S. Recalls Ambassador To Ecuador

By MALCOLM BARR
WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department announced yesterday the withdrawal of the U.S. ambassador to Ecuador, Wymberley DeR. Coerr, in response to a request by the Ecuadorian government.

His expulsion stemmed from a speech he delivered at the Colegio Americano (American School) in Quito, Coerr was accused of an "attitude of public, open criticism" of Ecuador's president, Otto Arosemena Gomez.

The withdrawal of Coerr was demanded Saturday by Ecuador's ambassador in Washington, Carlos Mantilla. The Ecuadorian government gave Coerr 48 hours to leave the country.

Coerr, a career minister and a member of the foreign service since 1939, will leave Quito today.

The State Department received Mantilla's note requesting Coerr's withdrawal late Saturday afternoon about 24 hours after Coerr's speech had been delivered. State Department officials responded yesterday afternoon in announcing the ambassador's immediate withdrawal.

U.S. officials said "we see no real reason" to retaliate and ask Ecuador to withdraw its ambassador.

There was no immediate announcement of any replacement for Coerr. His charge d'affaires John J. Crowley Jr. will assume charge after Coerr's departure.

Demos Pick Chicago As Convention Site

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chicago won the competition for the 1968 Democratic Presidential Nominating Convention last night.

National Chairman John M. Bailey announced at a news conference that Chicago was chosen unanimously by the convention site committee at a two hour meeting.

R won out over bids from Houston, Texas, and Miami Beach, Fla.

There was no immediate announcement of a time for the convention, although it was expected to follow by at least 30 days the Aug. 5 convening of the Republican Nominating Convention in Miami Beach.

The word had been that President Johnson wanted to take the party spectacular to the Midwest.

The site committee compromised on an Aug. 26 convening date for the convention. This was similar to the date the Democrats met in Atlantic City, N.J., in 1964.

Chicago put up a total of $900,000 in cash and fringe benefits for the convention.

Calls on Administration To Admit Failure in Policy

BY PETER GROSE

(c) N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Arthur Schlesinger Jr., called on the Johnson Administration yesterday to admit failure in the policy of escalation in Vietnam, free itself from the "obsession" with military victory and turn instead to slowing down the war.

The historian and former aide to President Kennedy outlined the approach of other liberals, including the National Board of the American for Democratic Action, in offering to support candidates of either major party in 1968 who will advocate a more flexible attitude toward negotiations.

Arguments for the opposite course of action, for more men and firepower, were reviewed by Sen. John C. Stennis, D-Miss., chairman of the Senate Preparedness Subcommittee.

Interviewed on the American Broadcasting Company's "Issues and Answers" program, Senator Stennis called for the opposition to President Johnson's Vietnam strategy a result of "immature thinking."

He urged the bombing or mining of the north Vietnamese port Haiphong, and warned of the dangers of a new bombing pause.

Schlesinger delivered the keynote address to a group of anti-war demonstrators at the National Assembly for Negotiation Now, a movement of religious and youth groups, labor unions and about 20 voluntary social organizations pressing for a de-escalation of the Vietnam war.

Stennis called for more conventional firepower to change the character of the war away from its guerrilla tactics to "make it more our type of war."

He cited detailed intelligence reports of the resupply missions which the North Vietnamese carried out during the latest cessation of bombing in February, and argued that it would be "certain death" to U.S. soldiers to allow this to happen again.

Israel, Red Cross Work To Repatriate Refugees

(c) N.Y. Times News Service

TEL AVIV—Israel and the International Red Cross are drawing up a plan that may lead to the repatriation of some 40,000 Arab refugees.

Described here as a plan for the reunification of families divided by the war, it is expected to be completed this week and then be presented to the Jordanian government.

However, it is unlikely to satisfy the Jordanians, because it provides only for the repatriation of west bank residents.

It does not cover refugees of the 1948 Palestine war who fled from United Nations Relief Works Agency camps on the west bank during the June fighting or fugitives from the Arab sector of Jerusalem. The Israelis now treat the Arab sector of Jerusalem as an integral part of Israel.

The number of refugees who fled across the Jordan River during and after the June war has been estimated at 200,000, according to UNRWA figures. The organization includes some 120,000 1948 refugees on their relief rolls. The number of fugitives from Jerusalem has not been estimated.

A Defense Ministry source here said the plan did not rule out the reunion of Arab families in Jerusalem. He said the procedure for Jerusalemites was the same as for other Israeli Arabs wishing to be joined by relatives.

Tens of thousands of Arabs have actually entered Israel over the years through that procedure, the official noted.

Meanwhile, the repatriation of former officials at El Arish, the United Arab Republic administrative center in Sinai, is scheduled to begin today.

Under an arrangement negotiated by the International Red Cross in Cairo, 500 to 600 Egyptians will be ferried across the Suez Canal.

Titusville Man Presides

James B. Stevenson, publisher of the Titusville Herald, presided at the first executive session of the seventh Pennsylvania Historical and Museum Commission last week shortly after members were sworn in by Gov. Raymond P. Shafer.

Stevenson, the oldest member of the present commission, in point of service, was named to the group in 1952 to succeed his father, the late Edgar T. Stevenson. He has served as chairman of the commission since 1962.

The historical and museum commission is an official agency of the Commonwealth and administers and operates the state's museums, historic sites and properties. The commission is charged with preservation of the official state archives and an extensive publications and educational program.

New Movement is Cause Of Concern in Red China

By TILLMAN DURDIN

HONG KONG — A shadowy "new left" movement in Communist China that condemns both the cultural revolution of Chairman Mao Tse-tung and the "revisionists" that the Maoists seek to purge is reported to be causing concern in Peking.

According to information reaching the Chinese Nationalist authorities in Taipei, several important Communist party officials were recently arrested in Peking in a move that appears to be connected to the "new left" group.

The "new left" or "extreme left thought trend," as the movement is described in the Chinese Communist press, has been the subject of recent commentaries by newspapers in Shanghai, Changsha in Hunan and Huohot in Inner Mongolia. The newspaper comments were then carried in radio reports reaching Hong Kong.

The only organized agency of the "new left" so far mentioned, the May 16 Detachment, was denounced last month by Chiang Ching, Mao's wife. She called it a counterrevolutionary organization of the left that included "misled" young people

Ford Says Taxpayers Are Asked To Subsidize the 'Other War'

(c) N.Y. Times News Service
WASHINGTON — Rep. Gerald R. Ford, R-Mich., the House Republican leader, said yesterday that by "Americanizing" South Vietnam's economy as well as the fighting, the Johnson administration was frustrating its declared purpose of building a free and independent society.

"American taxpayers are being asked to subsidize the 'other war' on the economic front to an ever-increasing degree while South Vietnamese commitments steadily decline," Ford said.

"Bluntly, Americans must pay more to make Saigon inter-richer and the Vietnamese people more completely dependent on us. This is just the opposite of our declared purpose. This trend should be immediately reversed."

Commenting on a New York Times survey of governors, senators, representatives and administrative officials that disclosed a decline in public support of the administration's conduct of the war, Ford called attention to testimony before a House Appropriations Subcommittee that nobody in the administration was satisfied with South Vietnam's contribution to the war effort.

The testimony was given by Rutherford M. Poats, deputy administrator of the Agency for International Development, who was in direct charge of aid to South Vietnam until he was promoted to his present post several months ago.

Taken in executive session last May, Poats' testimony attracted little attention when released in abridged form by the Foreign Operations Subcommittee several weeks ago, sandwiched between more than 2,500 pages of the printed hearings.

Rep. Donald W. Riegle Jr., R-Mich., who led the questioning of Poats, brought out that Korea remained united in its war effort despite a price inflation of 2,400 per cent in three years, but South Vietnam was less than fully committed although its inflation was being held to 40 per cent this year by substantial amounts of A.I.D.-financed commodities.

Riegle: "It seems to me that what is happening is (South Vietnam), by controlling its inflation more effectively than Korea did, is getting rich at the same time that it is waging war. I am not suggesting that the whole country is getting rich but it appears to me that somebody is profiting greatly in Vietnam. Is this a fair statement?"

Poats: "In Korea you had a simple clear external aggression, a unified South Korea fighting against that aggression. It was a short war—three years. These people in Vietnam have been involved in war off and on since 1945. There is not now a unit in South Vietnam that has in Korea."

Riegle: "You are saying in essence, then, if this war was conducted in a way that required greater economic sacrifice by certain elements in Vietnam, the political instability is such that the country might fly apart—is that right?"

Poats: "Exactly."

Riegle: "That, to me, is a most discouraging thing."

The subcommittee chairman, Rep. Otto E. Passman, D-La., interrupted to say he found the testimony "frightening" and added that "unless you can get the South Vietnamese to recognize that they have something to save for themselves and for their children, I do not believe we will ever get on top of this unmanageable mess."

The hearing record showed that of $550 million requested for the administration for non-military operations in South Vietnam this year, $230 million was for the commercial import program or "economic stabilization" and about $100 million for the "revolutionary development" or pacification program.

Riegle summed up as follows:

"It seems to me that we have established that if we were to withdraw our A.I.D. program that the government would likely collapse over there and for all intents and purposes the war would be over," Poats agreed.

In his statement on the Poats testimony, Ford said the "Americanization of the military effort in South Vietnam obviously has already gone too far," he added.

"What is less obvious to the American people is the astonishing Americanization of the South Vietnamese economy."

"This 'other war' supposedly is as vital to long-range success in Southeast Asia as our major combat commitments. Surely the South Vietnamese must be involved in this effort to a maximum degree but the trend toward total Americanization of the 'other war' is deeply disturbing."

State police also investigated a two car crash east of Warren on Rt. 6 Saturday afternoon. They reported Frank Zaffino, 36, 712 W. Fifth ave., Warren, crashed into the rear of the car ahead, operated by Margaret L. Felsals, 50, 205 Church st., Sheffield.

A burned out lamp in the red light at Fourth and Market st. in Warren contributed to a two car crash yesterday morning. Police said both Doris M. Martin, 44, 1439 Mill st., Hinsdale, N.Y., traveling north on Market and Maurice J. Stillwell, 53, 629 Beech st., Warren, headed west on Fourth claimed the light was green in their direction. An investigation showed the red light facing south on Market was burned out.

Eleanor Nulph, 46, 216 Eddy st., Warren, was charged with reckless driving Saturday afternoon after her car crashed into the rear of a vehicle operated by Keith Anderson, 33, Box 84, Irvine, on Pennsylvania near East st.

Borough police also reported a collision at Pennsylvania ave. and Water st. yesterday afternoon. They said Lawrence P. Anderson, 21, 914 Fourth ave., Warren, turned onto Water st. from Pennsylvania ave. and hit a southbound vehicle operated by Dean A. White, 33, 615 Water st.

lifted 44,350 pounds to a height of more than a mile. In the Soviet Union Hooks have been used to carry oil rigs to Siberia.

The Hooks are powered by twin-turbine engines which turn contrarotating rotors. The M14 Hooks are much smaller and carry about 14 troops.

The two biggest U.S. helicopters used in South Vietnam are the Boeing-Vertol CH-47 Chinook and the Sikorsky CH-53.

The twin-engined Chinook, which has two three-blade rotors, has a maximum speed of about 178 miles per hour. It can carry up to 44 troops plus crew and a maximum payload of 20,830 pounds. The Chinook also has an external cargo boom of 16,000 pounds capacity. Its fuselage is 51 feet long.

The CH-53, also a twin-engined model but with only one main rotor, has a maximum speed level of 195 miles per hour. It can carry 38 combat-equipped troops plus its crew of three. The CH-53 has a normal payload of about 8,000 pounds. Its fuselage length is 67 feet.

With ground action generally light and scattered, despite the some stiff isolated battles, the emphasis in the war remained in the North where 126 missions were flown as American pilots piled in strikes before the expected monsoon change in the weather later this month. The downing of three U.S. planes, plus two previously undisclosed losses, brought to 694 the number of American aircraft lost in combat over North Vietnam.

The destruction of six Soviet-built choppers—the first such claim in the war—occurred when Air Force Thunderchief pilots swept down on a camouflaged area previously spotted in aerial photos. Leading the flight was a former X15 test pilot, Col. Robert M. White, of Fairborn, Ohio.

In addition to a brief brush with two MIGs during the raid on the helicopter park, other Air Force pilots in supersonic Phantom jets clashed with at least five MIGs above the airfield at Hoa Lac.

Sheffield Johnny Appleseed Festival Proclaimed Success

The first annual Sheffield Appleseed Fall Festival, from its opening at noon Friday, October 6 until it closed Saturday at 6 p.m., turned out to be an unqualified success. The weatherman cooperated with two of the finest fall days for a total attendance in excess of 8,000 people.

Both exhibitors, contestants and local organizations with booths pronounced it an exceptional affair. According to executive director Eugene Leseman, plans are already under way for the 1968 Sheffield Johnny Appleseed Fall Festival.

Toward the end of the event every booth had sold out, and all food had been sold. There were visitors attending from as far as Florida, New England, Ohio, and various cities in Pennsylvania and New York.

One of the most popular features was the guided tour through McMillen Lumber Company's modern sawmill and dimension stock plant. Kent Helicopters were in the air from morning until night.

Giving exhibitions and participating in contests were many of the "greats" of the woodsmen's and loggers world. World Champion lumberjack Dave Geer and his partner Gib Engle; National champion lumberjack Sven Johnson of Connecticut and his partner Charlie Wojtkum; Bob Walbel nationally known lumberjack from Oregon; John, Wayne and Robert Buhler, also famed in woodmen's circles; and other notable blades made colorful contributions of skill and spectacle.

The display of the new Forest Industries Historical Museum of Sheffield was exceptionally well received, presided over by its president, historian Bruce Smith and others.

About thirty high school boys and a contingent from Blue Jay Job Corps center were on hand both days to help the committees in many events, keep the place spotless, and help dismantle booths and other equipment.

Johnny Appleseed himself was on hand, impersonated by elementary school principal John Johnson.

The Sheffield Twirlettes, both senior and junior divisions, started off the Saturday program. Their exhibition won enthusiastic acclaim, for precision, complicated maneuvers and exceptional skill.

Sheffield Chamber of Commerce, which sponsored the Johnny Appleseed Fall Festival, ended up without being in the red. It is generally acknowledged the two-day festival was one of the biggest events in Warren County in recent years.

Grand prize of the $450 Cherry Desk, crafted by General Interiors Corporation, Lewisburg, Pa., famous "Pennsylvania House" furniture, was won by John Andrews, Pickering st., Sheffield. The prize rifle was won by Thomas Abraham, RD 1, Clarendon.

Contestants pronounced the Sheffield Johnny Appleseed Fall Festival one of the finest woodmen's shows in the East. It provides Warren County with a new exciting annual event that, in its first experimental year, drew tourists from many states, as well as thousands from near-by.

CONTEST WINNERS

Officials of the Johnny Appleseed Festival at Sheffield announced yesterday the winners in the numerous contests held at the event.

The winners for each event in the order they finished were:

Lightweight chain saw: Joe Gilmore, Leo Davis, Alfred Erickson, Robert Peffer.

Mens bucksaw: Dave Geer, Sven Johnson, Bob Walbel, Gib Engle.

LBJ Throws Challenge At World's Educators

By FRANCES LEWINE

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — President Johnson threw out a challenge to the world's educators last night to try to make use of modern communications to extend learning and to get world leaders "to convert man's tragic will to destroy into a determination to build."

The President pointed to the "shocking facts" that in the 20th century, the richest age of history, four adults in 10 cannot read and write and "most people end their lives unable to write 'cat' or 'dog.'" Speaking to an International Conference on the World Crisis in Education before some 200 delegates from 54 countries at this restored colonial capital of Virginia, the President said these are facts that cry out "shame on this world! Shame on its leaders."

Johnson said, as he has said before, that he hopes future historians will call this period in America "the age of education" for what the U.S. government has done to increase its aid to learning.

But, he said, when it comes to education "every nation, including this one, is still a developing country."

The President placed three challenges before the conference which he initiated in a speech at the East-West Center of Cultural and Technological Exchange in Honolulu last October.

— How to use educational television to accelerate basic education for our children, make the best teachers available to a maximum number of students.

— How to make the best scholars and teachers in the world available to all universities, wherever they may be through satellite communication.

— And how we can use the latest methods of microfilming and communication to provide those doing scholarship and research everywhere the best library facilities that there are anywhere.

The President suggested that the United Nations launch an international education year-a target time for reviewing goals and planning new progress.

Tokyo Police Battle Rioters; One Killed, 500 Are Injured

By TOROA TOMINAGA

TOKYO (AP) — Police battled virtually man for man for three hours yesterday with 2,500 leftists, who swung six-foot bamboo poles and hurled rocks in a demonstration protesting the coming visit of Prime Minister Eisaku Sato to South Vietnam.

One demonstrator was killed. About 160 demonstrators and 339 policemen were injured. A spokesman said 27 policemen and 14 demonstrators were in serious condition. Fifty-eight demonstrators were arrested.

Police threw 2,000 men into the melee.

The rioting broke out when the demonstrators, most of them members of the radical Zengakuren student organization, tried to march into Tokyo's International Airport an hour before Sato's departure on an Asian tour that winds up later this month in Saigon.

Police used tear gas for the first time since the massive Zengakuren demonstrations in 1960 when students protested the ratification of the U.S.-Japanese security treaty. These clashes eventually led to a cancellation of a visit to Japan by President Dwight D. Eisenhower in June, 1960.

Although the rioting was serious, Sato's plane took off without incident for the first stop on his tour - Jakarta, Indonesia. He also will visit Australia, New Zealand and the Philippines before going to South Vietnam.

Swinging the bamboo poles and throwing rocks, the demonstrators attempted to crash a police blockade to reach the airport.

Police had parked riot trucks across a bridge leading to the airport, and the demonstrators burned eight of them. The police then turned tear gas and fire hoses on the demonstrators and pounded them with batons.

The demonstrators contended that Sato's visit to South Vietnam would contribute to what they called the U.S. "aggressive war" against the Communists.

Twenty domestic flights were held up by the demonstration because passengers were unable to reach the airport by road and had to be ferried by water launch.

Sato and his wife arrived in Jakarta under conditions of tight security. Troops armed with automatic weapons lined his five-mile route from Jakarta's airport to Sato's hotel.

Tommy Manville, Noted Playboy, Dead at 73

NEW YORK (AP) — Tommy Manville, playboy of the Manhattan playboys and 11 times married, died yesterday at 73.

Manville had been in ill health for years and had lived quietly, for him, in Chappaqua, N.Y., with wife No. 11, German-born Christiana Erdien, 26, whom he married in 1960. It was there he died of unannounced causes.

"Marrying Manville" was the tabloid darling of the Roaring '20s and kept front pages sparkling during the dreary years of the Depression in the '30s.

His frantic pursuit of beautiful blondes, his hectic night-clubbing, and on-again, off-again marriages were the talk of the town.

A spokesman for the family said, however, that he had been suffering from a heart ailment for six years.

"Marrying Manville" was the tabloid darling of the Roaring '20s and kept front pages sparkling during the dreary years of the Depression in the '30s.

"Manville is not cheap," he told a reporter. "At least I keep my money in circulation."

Flamboyant Manville inherited an estimated $10 million on the death of his father, president of the H. W. Johns-Manville Co.

He often said that besides the $10 million, his father left him "lots of shares of Johns-Manville." He added that he sold the shares and "that's where I got most of my dough."

A good part of the money went to pay for his marital adventures. Manville estimated he had spent $1.25 million on settlements for the nine women who divorced him. Wife No. 8 was killed in an automobile accident.

He spent other millions on his perennial "Honeymoon Cottage", a luxurious estate in New Rochelle called Bon Repos-Good Rest.

In 1955 he testified at a divorce hearing that he was down to his last $2 million and had to sell Bon Repos and buy the cottage in Chappaqua. Both are in Westchester County.

Prince Charles Goes to College

LONDON — Prince Charles, who will be 19 next month, heir to the throne of Britain, went to college yesterday.

He entered Trinity, the largest of the colleges that make up Cambridge University, where he is to specialize in archeology and anthropology.

Dr. John Morton Coles, his director of studies, had announced that the prince would have to "muck in" like the other 220 freshmen at Trinity, but it didn't quite work out that way.

Hundreds of persons crowded into the cobbled forecourt outside the college's ancient gateway, and hundreds more lined the streets outside as the prince arrived in a red "mini" Austin yesterday afternoon.

Lord Butler, the master of Trinity, was waiting to welcome him and introduce him to his college quarters. Some one in the crowd shouted "good luck!" and Prince Charles called back, with a smile, "I'll need it."

Fleming Says 'Time to Fish Or Cut Bait' Over Tax Pack

By PAUL ZDINAK

HARRISBURG (AP) — The Shafer Administration views with caution the proposed resumption of bipartisan legislative negotiations on the tax impasse.

"We have gone through this before and have yet to resolve the problem," an administration official commented. "We don't need six more weeks of negotiations."

"If they can get together and move a tax package, fine. But if it would be a long and drawn out affair, we don't need it and neither does the state," he added.

President Pro Tempore Robert D. Fleming had suggested over the weekend that Democratic and Republican leaders get together in an effort to reach an agreement over the rest of Gov. Shafer's $285 million tax package.

"It's time to fish or cut bait," Fleming, R-Allegheny, said, noting that time is running out on the 1967 legislature. "I would hope we can get the leaders from both houses together today to iron this out."

The House and Senate, which have slim Republican majorities, return to work today. This will be the first House session in three weeks with the exception of a brief, token session for purposes of signing the corporate net income tax bill.

Concerned with this legislative delay on taxes and other administration proposals, Shafer cancelled his plans to attend the National Governor's Conference cruise Oct. 16-24 to the Virgin Islands.

"There are just 39 legislative days remaining for us to take this action. My attendance at the National Governor's Conference would prevent me from devoting full attention to accomplishing this," the governor said. He is sending two representatives to the conference.

Meanwhile, Fleming said he saw no change in the fiscal dispute.

"In the Senate, the most we have is 25 votes," Fleming said. "We are now at the place we have to try to negotiate with the other side. And there's no use negotiating without the House."

With the state's Constitutional Convention scheduled to convene in Harrisburg Dec. 1, the Republican leadership is attempting to adjourn the legislature by the end of November at the latest.

Another $55 million in cigarette taxes is before the Senate while House Republicans have not attempted to move on additional $175 million in new revenue Shafer is seeking to balance his $1.79 billion budget.

Fleming's call for bipartisan negotiations met with a favorable reaction from Democratic Senate Minority Leader Ernest P. Kline.

"I certainly would be agreeable," Kline said. "Both sides know that ultimately this problem is going to have to be solved."

Democratic House Minority Leader Herbert Fineman commented:

"I'm ready. He doesn't have much time left. But the governor is going to have to be more reasonable. I'm for making certain there are sufficient bucks in the treasury, but I'm not about to give him a surplus."

The Pennsylvania AFL-CIO, meanwhile, issued a statement declaring its unequivocal opposition to nine proposed House tax measures, including new levies on beer, soda and liquor.

"We find these bills to be regressive and, in the main, applying most unfairly and adversely to persons of low and modest means," said Harry Boyer, the labor organization's president.

Shafer had proposed a standby personal income tax last June to take effect when the state budget went above $1.9 billion and could not be met from existing revenue.

The proposal was lost in the concern over his immediate tax problems. But a growing number of lawmakers believe even more strongly in light of events over the past four months—that the income tax is the ultimate solution to the state's long range tax problems.

Emergency Landing

SAN JUAN, P.R. (AP) — A Spanish jet airliner with 40 persons aboard made an emergency landing at San Juan International Airport yesterday after developing engine trouble over the Atlantic on a flight to Cuba.

The 30 passengers, none of them injured, were escorted to the U.S. Immigration Office, to wait for the plane to be repaired.

Gen. Gavin Says Rocky 'Best Candidate'

(c) N.Y. Times News Services

NEW YORK — Gen. James M. Gavin, who has been mentioned as a possible Republican presidential nominee, has told Newsweek Magazine that he regards Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller as "the best candidate."

Gavin, former ambassador to France and now head of a management consulting firm, said in an interview in the current issue of the magazine: "I thought when I began speaking out this summer, that Nelson Rockefeller clearly was the best candidate. I still believe this. I know he has not publicly voiced any views on foreign policy or a long time. When he does, I am sure, he will face Vietnam in 1968 with as much courage as he faced Goldwaterism in 1964."

Gavin said that President Johnson confused "political compromise in 1967 with Munich in 1938." He also said that Johnson "has the present confused with the past—and no time to study the future."

Monk Sends Blood Letter

SAIGON (AP) — One of South Vietnam's militant Buddhist monks has sent a letter written in his own blood to U.N. Secretary-General U Thant, asking Thant to intervene in the Buddhists' dispute with the government and condemning President Johnson.

Thich (Venerable) Minh Trueng, a monk at the An Quang pagoda, the militants' headquarters, wrote the letter Saturday. He pricked his finger, cut his arm and let the blood drip into a saucer. Then he dipped a writing brush in the blood.

Free Press Means Much

Newspaper Week! October 8 to 14. Probably the most impressive way for the public to learn what newspapers mean in their daily lives would be to have no papers printed during Newspaper Week—but that is not practical.

The hometown paper is the living record of what happens in the thousands of communities across the land — marriages, births, deaths, social activity, politics, school news, legal notices, advertised products to inform customers, world news, everything that enables the U.S. citizen to be familiar with the latest devices and products by which he enjoys the highest living and information standards in the world.

But over and above these material blessings, a free press, which is the background of free speech, is the average man's guarantee of personal liberty, religious freedom and protection against political and judicial persecution. Dictators are afraid of a free press, hence they have a controlled press. The people read only what their rulers wish them to read. Try imagining if you can, what it would be like to live in a country where an editor dared not print a letter criticizing the political party in power, and where an editor feared to express an adverse opinion. Think of what a free press really means to you—life, freedom from political oppression, liberty and the pursuit of happiness under our Constitution.

The Color Comes Quietly

It comes quietly as mist in the night, but it doesn't vanish as the sun rises. It remains, stronger day after day. It spreads, leaf to leaf, branch to branch, tree to tree. It climbs from the valley to the hilltop. Soon it will possess the countryside.

It begins as a few scarlet leaves in the sumac while the goldenrod is still at its prime, before the asters claim the roadside. It spreads through the bushes and up the gray trunk of the dead popple where Virginia creeper climbs, a fiery beacon in the woodland. It stains the viburnums crimson and purple in the underbrush. It smolders beside the stone wall where Jack-in-the-pulpit's ember-red berries are clustered in the grass.

The elms turn lemon yellow, then rust away. White ash has a spectrum all its own, from bronze and yellowish-brown to blue and eggplant-purple. Swamp maples turn as scarlet as a tanager, fill the lowland with a tree-deep pond of stormy sunset color. Streamside basswood has ruddy, blushing bronze on its leaves. Up the hillside, just below the pines and hemlocks, the birches flash and flutter, yellow as lemon pie—not golden but yellow. The gold comes in the sugar maples, sunlight gold and bluish pink, when the swamp maples begin to darken past their prime.

And finally come the oaks, the deliberate oaks, scarlet and ruby and crimson and maroon and Burgundy and purple, and all the warm, leathery browns. We sum it all up in two words: The Color.—NYT.

Johnson, de Gaulle and Mao

WASHINGTON — Three men now dominate political discussion in the world—President Johnson in the United States, General de Gaulle in Europe, and Mao Tse-tung in Asia.

For the moment, what Johnson decides about the war in Vietnam, what de Gaulle thinks about the organization of Europe, and what Mao decides about China and the future of Asia command the attention and influence the course of world politics.

But only for the moment. They are all in trouble with their own people. They dominate the news but not the deeper trends of history. On the surface they are decisive, but the tides are running against them.

President Johnson misjudged the temper of the American people on Vietnam. He thought they were in a pugnacious mood and would run with the hawks for more war; they are now choosing compromise and peace. De Gaulle thought the trend was against Britain joining Europe, but the trend there, particularly among the coming generation, is for Britain and European unity. Mao Tse-tung is for the old Communist ideology of world revolution, but again the pragmatic young people in China have their doubts, and modern pragmatic Japan, rather than ideological China, is now making its real imprint upon Asia.

There is, therefore, a fundamental difference between the news and the trends of the day, between the men who are going and the ideas that are coming.

The main issue of the coming generation is not Johnson, de Gaulle and Mao, not Vietnam or the glory of France or the little red book sayings of China's aging political philosopher, but the maintenance of peace, the danger of racial war between the hungry agricultural nonwhite nations and the affluent industrial white nations, and the danger of war between the races and the classes in the United States and in Latin America.

The question is how to get down to these basic issues. There is nothing more to say now about the personal eccentricities or policies of Johnson, de Gaulle and Mao, and nothing more boring.

The world is stuck for the time being with these men and policies—nobody knows for

RUSSELL BAKER Hardware Always Wins

WASHINGTON—A playwright was hired a few years ago to produce a movie script for an inarticulate young thing who looked as if she might be marketable on film as a sex goddess. At first meeting he sensed that behind her pout lurked a mind with the voltage of a lima bean.

To cheer her, he promised to write a script that would make the world forget Shakespeare. She replied, "I don't do long sentences." "What does she do?" the baffled playwright asked her agent. "She sulks," the agent explained.

The United States has a lot in common with that girl. Like her, it wants to do the thing it is good at. This is the real reason why the United States Government and its enormous quasi-private industrial branch are determined to build a super-sonic commercial jetliner at public expense.

What the United States does best is not sulking, but performing technological stunts. Some of these serve humanity, some are pointless and some make the human condition more difficult than it already is.

The squeezable plastic cat-sap container, for example, exemplifies technological stunting at its best. The orbiting of a satellite that enables a man to sit in Hackensack and watch a golf match being played in Hawaii, while inoffensive enough as a piece of technology, is essentially pointless.

The super-sonic commercial jetliner, or S.S.T., as it is called in Federal-military-industrial circles, is a gesture of technological indifference to humanity. No matter. No power on earth can prevent its development, because building S.S.T.'s is the kind of thing we do best.

When a pouty girl of arresting proportions does best at sulking, she is not going to be persuaded to read long sentences. When a nation does best at perfecting machines, it will not be seduced into excessive pre-occupation with humanity.

The point was illustrated this week by the Senate which voted to spend $142 million to help the Boeing Aircraft Company start work on the thing. A small band of Senators objected, but no consideration of logic, emotion or compassion could stay the country's determination to suffer the affliction of the S.S.T.

At a moment when Congressmen were demanding that spending be cut to the bone, the argument that $142 million was a lot of money to spend for moving the jet set to Europe faster proved ineffectual. So did the argument that the S.S.T. would probably cost $2 billion or $3 billion more before it was finished.

When a man whose best thing is his golf game economizes, he cancels his wife's magazine subscriptions, not his country club membership. When the United States economizes it cuts the wretch trying to sneak onto the welfare roll. Relieving wretchedness is not what the United States does well; you don't ask a sex goddess to do long sentences.

The argument that the S.S.T. profanes the spirit of free enterprise seems hardly to have been made at all. Tapping the public's pocket for $142 million to help Boeing company sell more airplanes would seem on the face of it to make Boeing a subsidiary of the Government, or the Government a subsidiary of Boeing. Yet the Senate did not rise to defend the ancient American principles of business's right to freedom from public intervention or the public's freedom to withhold its capital from any company it chooses not to invest in.

There was a larger argument at work: Building S.S.T.'s is what the United States does well. Technology is the name of the game. We may be a bust at all that business about the good life for everybody and liberty and justice for all, but Buster, one thing we can do is build machines, and as long as we can build machines we're still on top because machines are what the world is about nowadays, and save all that about the wretchedness of the earth and the free enterprise system for my Fourth of July speech. We don't do long sentences.

The argument was never stated in these terms, of course. The closest approximation was that if we do not build the S.S.T. other countries will. Nobody thought it conclusive to reply, "That's their tough luck."

The S.S.T. will be built. It is as inevitable as next year's television season, styrene airline stewardesses and a Hilton Hotel in the Copernicus Crater. It will carry vital people to Europe two hours faster than they can get there today. With its canonading sonic boom a man will no longer be able to find peace of mind alone aboard his sailboat in the North Atlantic. Too bad about that. It's what we do.

Bunker's Cable Discouraging

WASHINGTON — The White House has received a very significant cable from Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker in Saigon which highlights the obstacles President Johnson faces in negotiating peace.

The telegram was received just before Johnson's speech in San Antonio in which he went further than ever before regarding a bombing pause; and though Bunker's cable was discouraging, the President made his speech anyway.

What Ambassador Bunker reported on was his talks with a member of the International Commission who had just arrived from North Vietnam.

This official had traveled all over the country, had talked with the most influential members of the North Vietnamese cabinet, and reported there was no chance whatsoever of Ho Chi Minh's accepting a peace bid.

Secretary of Defense McNamara and the Joint Chiefs of Staff have pretty much reconciled their differences over bombing targets in North Vietnam, each by giving a little.

The joint chiefs have taken 30 targets to which McNamara objected off their list, and McNamara has okayed the remainder of the list.

Late in summer, the Secretary of Defense had testified that the worthwhile targets were about exhausted, and this brought a stentorian blast from Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., chairman of the Senate Preparedness Committee. Stennis sided with the military leaders of the Pentagon.

Since then, however, the joint chiefs have trimmed their sails. They have yielded on the Haiphong docks, regarding which both Rusk and McNamara are adamantly opposed, plus certain other much smaller targets.

McNamara objected to bombing one small tire plant because only 30 tires were being produced. He argued that this wasn't worth either the risk of American pilots or Vietnamese civilian life. He also opposed bombing such small targets as trucks standing under trees.

On the other hand some targets have been put back on the list, such as bridges which have been rebuilt and power plants which have been reconstructed.

Targets are selected in conferences attended by both Rusk and McNamara, where either can object.

Objections don't result in acrimonious arguments. Usually it's the Secretary of State more than the Secretary of Defense who will say, "I'd like to study that one further," or the Secretary of Defense who will say, "That one isn't worth the risk of lives involved."

When they do object, the targets are automatically removed from the list until the next meeting. The President has never yet okayed a target to which Rusk or McNamara objected.

Secretary McNamara's personal relations with the joint chiefs are good. Gen. Earle Wheeler, chairman, and Gen. Harold Johnson, Chief of Staff of the Army, together with Gen. John McConnell, Chief of the Air Force, and Adm. David McDonald, Chief of Naval Operations, are all likeable, reasonable men.

It's the generals and admirals down the line who don't like McNamara. It's not a personal matter but rather the fact that for the first time in history the Secretary of Defense is a tough, highly intelligent executive who knows his business and is definitely running the Defense Department.

The joint chiefs, torn between McNamara whom they like and their generals and admirals who don't like him, instinctively are loyal to their own officers.

SYLVIA PORTER

The 'New Economics'

The "New Economics" is now failing miserably—and the blunt reason why is that the White House and Congress are failing to provide the tools to make it work.

This is a serious accusation in which you and I have a vital bread-and-butter stake. To illustrate, as a result of these failures our cost of living is climbing rapidly, our cost of borrowing money is rising, or dollar's buying power is dwindling, our pensions and savings funds are shrinking in value. But the accusation can be amply documented.

The essence of the New Economics is this:

(1) Our national economic goal is a strong, sustained growth which will create high employment, production, paychecks and profits—with reasonably stable prices.

(2) When our economy is operating below capacity, it is imperative to give it a combination of fiscal-monetary (tax, spending, credit) policies to speed up the rate of growth.

Among the appropriate stimulating policies would be: income tax cuts to spur consumer and business spending; tax incentives to encourage business investment in plants and equipment; easy and relatively inexpensive credit to stimulate borrowing of money; increasing government expenditures for a wide variety of projects.

(3) When our economy reaches the desired rate of growth, the policies should be delicately adjusted to sustain the trend.

(4) But when our economy overheats—because of too many stimulants or some overwhelming development such as Vietnam—it is imperative to switch to an entirely different set of tax-spending-credit policies to restrain the rate of growth.

Among the appropriate restraining policies would be: income tax increases to curtail consumer and business spending; suspension of tax incentives to encourage postponement of business investment; tighter credit to limit borrowing of money; stretching out of government expenditures.

Put this way, the New Economics is easy to understand. Actually, economists have been talking in these terms since World War II. The only aspect which is really "new" is that the idea of so fine-tuning the economy has in recent years achieved recognition at the White House level.

On the upside, the New Economics has worked magnificently. From early 1961 to late 1965, our economy was put into and held in a strong, beautifully balanced expansion by tax incentives, income tax cuts, easy credit, rising government spending.

But in late 1965, with the acceleration of the Vietnam war, the need arose for reversing the policies toward restraint. (This is not 20-20 hindsight! I have the columns in print to prove that top economists began calling for tax hikes, spending cuts and tighter credit back in late 1965—January 1966.)

The White House, though, did not respond. President Johnson did not ask for tax hikes early in the inflationary upswing. He did not take the lead in cutting back federal spending.

The beautiful balance in our economy evaporated. Although the Federal Reserve System slammed the brakes on credit, price stability was shattered, the basis for inflation was laid.

Now Vietnam is still accelerating and the danger of a 1967 inflation built on 1966's inflation is here and now.

This time, Congress is not responding to Johnson's plea for a tax surcharge. This time each is trying to make the other take the initiative in limiting government spending.

If we mess up our economy because we don't know what to do, our failure is at least excusable. But if we mess up because we won't do what we know we should do, it's inexcusable.

How, Whether And When

HARRISBURG—For those who think Pennsylvania is in a bind on the tax and budget front right now, a look into the future just a few months hence threatens to project a somewhat compounded fiscal nightmare!

At the moment (as it has been for the past several months!) concern centers around how, whether and when Pennsylvania's lawmakers are going to enact the $285 million in new taxes the Republican Shafter Administration has requested.

The $60 million in higher corporate taxes that has been cleared and approved by His Excellency is hardly a drop in the parched fiscal desert.

Denison

When the Legislature returns today following the two-week recess of the House of Representatives, the fiscal cudgel is scheduled to be picked up once more in the hope of working out a solution to the increased tax stake that has plagued lawmakers for the past four months.

This four-month phase is interesting. It represents three months of the "new" (current) 1967-68 fiscal year—and still the legislative greats are little closer to seeing eye to eye on what to do about tax increases than they were when the new fiscal year started July 1—or for that matter when the session got under way back on January 3.

The point to be made is that the 1967 session, now in its tenth month still hasn't told Pennsylvania's taxpayers how and what they are to fork over in the form of new taxes—and yet a new fiscal year isn't too far around the corner.

Technically, according to the calendar, the new 1968-69 fiscal year doesn't start until next July 1, which in theory should give no cause for worry. It isn't quite this way however. This is why:

Pennsylvania's long-heralded constitutional convention convenes December 1, which means, in essence, that the Legislature will have to be out of town by that time in order for the convention to take over the hall of the House of Representatives.

It also means that somehow the Legislature will have to resolve the tax increase impasse within the next month and a half—or Mr. Shafter will be standing at the foot of Capitol Hill with a tin cup.

On top of this though the constitutional convention will be in session three months—to March 1—which raises the question of what happens in January when the Legislature, by constitutional decree, must convene "the first Tuesday in January?"

Present plans call for the Legislature to duly convene on that date (January 2) even though the constitutional convention is still in being—and then recess until March.

At that point the start of the new 1968-69 fiscal year will be only four months distant, and inasmuch as legislators retain their political complexion for two years, the political make-up next year will be little different from the current scramble.

Thus the question of budget and taxes next year threatens to be not only as vexing as this year—but even more compounded, for this reason:

Assuming Mr. Shafter finally gets his complete $285 million tax increase over which he has been thrashing unsuccessfully so far, another round of tax increases is in the offing for next year!

another round of tax increases is in the offing for next year!

You don't believe it? Of course as little as possible is being said on this score at the moment, particularly when the present fiscal mess remains to be ironed out, but Budget Secretary Arthur F. Sampson, in a memorandum to one top Republican legislative leader stated flatly that additional revenue needed for 1968-69 (over and above the $268 million in new revenue needed for the fiscal year) will be minimum of $170 million "and could reach over $300 million!"

A compounded fiscal nightmare perhaps is putting it mildly!

Britain's Lord Attlee Dead at Age 84

Jeremy Thorpe, leader of the liberal party, said Lord Attlee was a "man of tremendous integrity and inner strength."

who "served with a concern and compassion which throughout his life he left for the less fortunate in our society."

Queen Elizabeth, who called Lord Attlee's death "a personal sorrow," said that he would be mourned "not only in parliament but in the nation and throughout the commonwealth which he served so steadfastly."

"As a minister in my grandfather's reign, a leader in the war, and as my father's prime minister, he made an enduring place for himself in the history of our country and the commonwealth," the Queen said.

In the little more than six years of the prime ministership of Clement Richard Attlee, from August, 1945, to October 1951, Britain and the British Commonwealth were unalterably changed. Major segments of industry were nationalized, the welfare state, with its cradle-to-the-grave social services, was introduced, and Indian Ceylon and Burma were granted their independence.

"The welfare state was what the British people wanted after the sacrifices of World War II," Lord Attlee (he had been raised to the peerage in 1953) told a visitor to his home in the spring of 1967.

"I certainly transformed Britain," he added, recalling his years in office. "My greatest (domestic) accomplishment was in initiating the welfare state."

The overseas accomplishment of which he was most proud, he said, was Indian independence.

In addition to withdrawal from India, Ceylon and Burma, Britain, at Attlee's direction pulled out of Palestine and Egypt. The state of Israel was created while he was prime minister.

Despite his efforts, however, Britain's economic and political role in the world diminished as that of the United States rose. This shift in power relationships was independent of any one man's exertions for it had begun long before World War II. Nevertheless, no other prime minister in the first half of this century did so much to reorient his country's economic and social policy and its foreign commitments.

The public and private man who bore responsibility for Britain's climactic changes was among the most unglamorous of persons. Indeed, he was, once remarked, "an ordinary chap," who did not aspire to the verve of David Lloyd George or the dash of Winston Churchill. But Attlee's very lack of color turned out to be a source of political strength for he seemed to epitomize the common man.

In place of pyrotechnics the small-statured, neatly attired, bald, mustached, pipe-smoking Attlee offered notable keenness of intellect, a capacity for hard-headed leadership and a talent for summing up people and situations quickly. These qualities helped him to hold together a disputatious party and to focus it on a moderate, pragmatic socialism.

"I used to think that it was incredible that I had only to say 'I want you to do this' or 'I want you to do that' and it would be done," he reminisced. "But this sense of personal achievement was dwarfed by the enormity of the job itself—the vastness of the great nation of which you are in command, and the perils in the great world outside."

In his old age, Attlee also conceded that he had concentrated on the main chance. "I had my struggle for power and it was quite fierce in its way," he said. "The fight to the top had to be hard and perhaps ruthless. Friendships can be broken and enemies made. I had my own unhappy moments, but to succeed was worth all the unhappiness of the struggle."

"The quiet little man with the quiet little voice," as Ernest Bevin once called him, was born Jan. 6, 1883, the fourth son of Henry Attlee, a well-to-do lawyer in Putney, London. He was prepared at Haileybury College for Oxford, where he attended University College and took a second-class honors degree in modern history.

Choosing law as his profession he was admitted to the bar in 1905.

He grew interested in a boys' club in the tough and poverty-ridden east end of London. In 1907 Attlee went to live at the club, remaining in the east end.

The result was that Attlee became a socialist, by joining the Independent Labor Party and the Fabian Society.

A volunteer at the age of 31 in the British forces in World War I, Attlee served in the Middle East and in France, emerging with the rank of major.

With demobilization, Attlee returned to the east end and Labor Party work. In 1919 he was elected to the Stepney Borough Council in London and served as mayor. This experience led to his election to the House of Commons.

In the interval before the outbreak of World War II in 1939 Attlee led the Labor attack in Commons on nonintervention in the Spanish Civil War and on Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain's appeasement of Germany and Italy. In 1940 when Winston Churchill formed his coalition government, Attlee became in succession deputy leader of the Commons, secretary of state for dominions and deputy prime minister.

With the defeat of Germany in 1945, a general election was called. As Labor Party leader, Attlee headed his party's campaign, which was based on a pledge of gradual socialization of heavy industry and broad increases in welfare programs.

To the disbelief of Churchill and to the amazement of many in the U.S., Labor won a sweeping victory by taking 390 Commons seats to 195 for the Conservatives.

Prime Minister Attlee's government began to nationalize industry. Private owners were compensated and experts were appointed to administrative positions. The Bank of England, the coal mines, cable and wireless services and civil aviation were the first businesses to be nationalized.

In 1951 he called a general election.

The total vote gave the Labor Party an edge of 200,000 over but, owing to the distribution of the votes, the Tories captured

Drive on to Bestow 'Rooster' on Wallace

By BILL NEIKIRK
BATON ROUGE, La. (AP)—A drive to bestow the coveted rooster on Alabama's George C. Wallace has been launched by leading Democratic conservatives in the hope of forcing President Johnson to run as a third-party candidate in Louisiana next year.

The rooster, not the donkey, is the emblem that identifies Democratic candidates on Louisiana's ballot. Available records show that it has been denied only once to the national party's presidential nominee.

That was in 1948, when the state Democratic party endorsed J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, the States Rights party's candidate.

Thurmond, now a Republican U.S. senator, got the rooster. The national Democratic candidate, President Harry S. Truman, was listed under the donkey. Thurmond carried Louisiana, 204,290 votes to 136,344.

The campaign by Wallace supporters has generated intense competition for the 117 seats on the Democratic State Central Committee, which will decide whether Johnson or Wallace gets the state party's endorsement—and the rooster.

Democrats loyal to the national party and conservatives backing Wallace are pitted in about 100 races for committee seats in the House of Commons.

Attlee's last years seemed singularly mellow and happy. Honors were showered upon him. Already a companion of honor, he was awarded the Order of Merit in 1951. Four years later he received an earldom and was made a Knight of the Garter.

In 1922 he had married Violet Helen Miller, a girl of middle class family and like her husband interested in social work.

He had four children—Lord Prestwood, Lady Felicity Harwood, Lady Allison Davis and Mrs. Harold W. Shipton. The wife of a professor at the University of Iowa, she relinquished her title in 1966 when she was naturalized as an American citizen.

There are 350 hopefuls in the primary Nov. 4. A run-off primary is scheduled for Dec. 16.

If Wallace supporters gain a majority on the committee and endorse the former Alabama governor, Johnson would have to get on the ballot by petition. He probably would run under the donkey, with no party name, as Truman did.

National party loyalists currently control the State Central Committee, but their margin is a slim one, four to six votes based on recent roll calls.

They accuse the Wallace forces of trying to carry Louisiana by subterfuge.

Conversational Counselling And Compost

By Bernie Wingert, County Agent

BY BERNIE WINGERT, County Agent
Three days out of the office this week — Friday morning finds my desk cluttered pretty deep with all kinds of material. Tuesday and Wednesday I was down at Oil City attending a two-day session on "Agricultural Record Keeping" with the use of computers, and the making of management decisions by a method known as Linear Programming.
Farm Management is changing rapidly along with everything else these days. What changed even more rapidly was the temperature of the conference room we were confined to. In this particular motel, the air conditioning system would run and lower the temperature to near freezing, then it would stop and the temperature would rise to about 94 deg. for about six minutes. Following the hot flash, the thing would plummet to freezing again. This violent fluctuation of temperatures, in the room was the result of lousy engineering in the first place, I believe. I'm certain I could design a system to keep a more uniform temperature in a dairy barn than we had to endure in that plush motel. In spite of the temperature change my two week old cold got no worse and I learned some new things about Agricultural record keeping which was the idea of the training session.
In addition, following Tuesday's classes, I played a game with two of the Penn State University specialists and several other county agents. This game involves the use of cards that are dealt in various numbers to the people around the

Tidioute 1st to Take Part In Vocational Test Program

Thomas Walsh, guidance counselor, Tidioute High School, has once again initiated a Vocational Testing Program in cooperation with the Pennsylvania State Employment Service. Tidioute High School will be the first in the county this year to take part in this program.

Graduating seniors will have the opportunity to take the General Aptitude Test Battery which is offered to students who are undecided about their vocational goal.

The test has been used by various State Employment Services since 1947. In Pennsylvania (730) high schools or 84.7 per cent of the (862) schools in the state participated in the program. Approximately (150,142) or 80.9 per cent of the (167,091) total graduates took part in the cooperative program last year.

In addition, throughout Pennsylvania, (61,868) or 41.2 per cent of the graduating seniors have registered for employment.

In Warren County, all (5) high schools with (135) or 18 per cent of the total graduates took part in the program. In addition, (253) or 36 per cent of the seniors registered for employment with local office.

Throughout the state, (31,905) or 31.6 per cent of the graduating seniors registered, were counseled. Pennsylvania administered the GATB to (28,677) or 89.9 per cent of the graduates counseled.

In Warren County (135) or 53 per cent of the graduating students registered, were counseled and tested with the GATB.

Pennsylvania recorded a total of (10,438) graduate placements, representing 15.9 per cent of the graduates registered. In Warren County, the graduate placements were (50), representing 32 per cent of the graduates registered in the local Employment Office.

John Labesky, employment counselor for the Warren Office will work with the seniors at the Tidioute School. The test itself, measures nine aptitudes which are known to relate to success in many occupations. Discussing his work with the seniors, Labesky said: "The focal point of Employment Counseling is the process in which it is determined, after a thorough analysis and discussion of the applicant's problems, which are the most suitable vocational choices and the possible occupational outlets that exist for each student."

The analysis is based on a multi-factor approach which includes the student's abilities, education, personal interests, past work experience, physical capabilities, hobbies, personal traits, leisure time activities, and social and economic conditions of the day.

Each student taking part in the program receives individual counseling interviews, group aptitude testing, work applications for employment, as well as registration and classification for work, placement services after graduation, a written summary on counseling and test results. Finally, there is a follow-up by the local Employment Office to determine the results of the program. Approximately (15) seniors from Tidioute High School will be participating in the program this year. The students are selected by the school guidance counselor for participation, and are boys and girls who will be entering the local labor market after graduation.

The program will begin during the first week of October when initial interviews will be held with the students at the school. Tidioute is one of (11) schools in a 2-county area (McKean & Warren) which take part in the program.

Warren County's Queens

One of the prettier aspects of the football season each year is the selection of queens to preside over the homecoming games. Some of the girls selected for the honor in the Warren area this year were Margo Finland (left), Youngsville High School; Linda Cooper (bottom), Warren Area High School and Karen Wade (right), Northern Area.

'Bat Gun' Featured In Anti-Measles Plan

Right out of Batman, the hypo-spray jet injector gun, to be used in Warren County on End Measles Sunday, October 15, will be quickly dubbed the "Bat Gun."

This special "50-shot anti-measles inoculation gun" has been specially designed for mass inoculation programs. It is preferred by most children who identify it with "Batman."

Technicians specially trained in use of the new injector gun will be brought into the county. The vaccine is now effective against measles, and eradication of the disease is now possible.

Immunization of a high proportion of susceptibles is all that is required to end transmission of measles," says chairman Dr. Edward Verville, chairman of the Warren County "End Measles" program next Sunday, "since the disease is not carried by insects, and does not occur in animal population.

Representing the Warren County Medical Society will be Dr. Verville, chairman; Dr. Joseph Mull, Dr. Verry M. Riley, Dr. John E. Thompson and Dr. Ronald Simonsen.

Measles vaccine will be administered between the hours of 1 and 5 at the clinics next Sunday at the following elementary schools: Pittsfield, Tidioute, Market Street, Sheffield and Sugar Grove.

Dr. Verville emphasizes measles is not a harmless childhood disease, but often a serious one. It has caused deaths of 51 children in Pennsylvania in the past four years. In addition, many have developed crippling disabilities.

It is hoped all parents will consider the importance of obtaining immunization, and seek to safeguard their children by attending one of the clinic sites.

'BAT GUN' FIGHTS MEASLES

Hypo-spray jet injector gun is a 50-shot anti-measles inoculation gun. It will be used by specially trained technicians at five Warren County "End Measles Sunday" clinics on October 15.

The program will be held at today's regular meeting at the Blue Manor Restaurant.

The 35mm slides are of the 10 local agencies in Warren County who are part of the United Fund prepared by the Fund's Public Relationship Committee.

Youth Who Killed Trooper Sentenced to Life in Prison

BENNETTSVILLE, S. C. (AP) — Years of prison walls and prison routine, but not the electric chair, was the fate today of Kenneth Hayes Fleming, 18, of Altoona, Pa., convicted of killing a state policeman.

A jury convicted young Fleming Saturday night, then recommended mercy. Without the recommendation, the death sentence would have been mandatory.

After hearing the jury, Judge William H. Rhodes sentenced Fleming to life imprisonment. He will be eligible for parole in 10 years.

In a tearful courtroom scene, two other young Pennsylvanians were sentenced for being accessories. Jeffrey Allen Brunner, 17, was sentenced to nine years, and Joyce Marie Macanick, also 17, was sentenced to three years. Both are from the Altoona area. They had pleaded guilty to accessory after the fact of murder. 13-year-old was given credit for a year he has spent in jail since his arrest.

Fleming was accused of shooting state trooper Charles Steele 26, of McBee, S.C., Sept. 11, 1966, when he stopped their auto. Before Steele died, he managed to empty his revolver at the fleeing auto. The three Pennsylvanians were arrested later in a bullet-pocked auto.

Fleming smiled Saturday night when he heard the recommendation of mercy and learned he had escaped the electric chair.

After sentence was pronounced, Fleming's court-appointed lawyer asked if the youth might see his parents. He had not seen them in more than a year while he was in jail. The mothers of Brunner and Miss Macanick broke down and wept during the sentencing. Mrs. Virginia Brunner tried to make a statement, but couldn't because of her sobbing.

Miss Macanick thanked her attorneys, and Judge Rhodes commended her for it. He said she was the only one of the three defendants who expressed appreciation.

School Night For Scouting Wednesday

Cub Scouts and Boy Scouts from 50 packs and troops in the Chief Cornplanter Council, Boy Scouts of America, will be wearing their uniforms Wednesday, to signal the Special School Night for Scouting meetings.

Boys who want to be Scouts will attend a special meeting with their parents at one of the local schools at 7:30 Wednesday.

Meetings will be held at South Street School — Arnold Allen; Lacy School — Charles Schaff; North Warren School — James Blomquist; Starbrick — Dennis Hedges; Youngsville — Peter Pryor; Sheffield — John Johnson; Tidioute — Arthur Atkins; Jefferson — James Holding; Pleasant Twp. — Robert Rieder; Sugar Grove — Vince Look; Market Street — Donald King; Seneca — Earl Mohnkern; Pittsfield — Thomas Socha; Landers — Robert Resh; Russell — Kenneth Pearson; McClintock — Chuck Masante; Irvinedale — Thayne Sando.

Cub Scout packs and Boy Scout Troops will be at the meetings to enroll boys and their parents in the Scout program; according to Charles Schaff, School Night coordinator for the council.

Scholarship

Arthur E. Yingling, 211 S. Perry st., Titusville, a senior at Pennsylvania State University, has received a $500 scholarship from the Pennzoll Co. He is one of 97 students in the College of Earth and Mineral Sciences at Penn State to receive an award. There were no recipients from Warren County.

Answers Your Problems

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a 16-year-old girl who has a problem that is too big for me. I don't know quite how to say this so I will come right out in plain English and tell you that my best friend is a lesbian.

Elsie (which is not her name) moved to our neighborhood last December. She was almost two years older than I but we got along fine. When she began to buy me gifts I felt uncomfortable and told her to please stop, but she kept buying things anyway. When she started telephoning every night to find out what I was doing the next day so she could chauffeur me, that REALLY made me uneasy.

My mother asked several questions about Elsie which should have opened my eyes, but I was too dumb to catch on. Mom wondered why Elsie never had a date, why she seemed so possessive of me and why she was so critical of every fellow I went out with. Last week Elsie slept at my house and I learned the truth. I was dumbfounded and I'm still in a daze. Now I wonder if people think something is wrong with me, too, because I have been so chummy with her.

I hate to be cruel but I don't want Elsie as a best friend anymore. Will you please give me a few facts on this subject. It is all such a mystery to me. Should I tell my mother? S.HOOK UP

DEAR SHOOK: There is no need to tell anyone. Cool the friendship and see Elsie only when others are present. Don't accept any more gifts from her and don't allow her to drive you any place.

Try to understand that the girl's deviate behavior is a result of an emotional illness. She did not choose to be this way. Some lesbians are content, others lead lonely and tortured lives. I always recommend psychiatric help when such people write to me. Although counseling rarely sets them straight, it gives them insight and it helps them to accept themselves.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am 60. My husband is 62. For the past 40 years Egbert has gone fishing or hunting every weekend plus every day he has not had to work. Birthdays, anniversaries, graduations, weddings, church, meant nothing to him. Camping came first, so I accepted the idea and never complained because I knew he loved camping so.

Now that the children are gone Egbert wants me to go camping with him. I have tried to be a good sport but I don't enjoy it one bit. I have gone on a few camping trips and it was such a hard

College Women Will Hear
Bureau Of Economic Official

Joseph E. Dunn, of the Department of Community Affairs, Harrisburg, and assistant director of the Bureau of Economic Development, will address the meeting of the Association of College Women on Wednesday, October 11, at 8 p.m. Mr. Dunn's topic will be on the Economic Opportunity Act of 1964, with brief remarks concerning programs in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and some comments concerning programs in Warren County.

His talk will be followed by a question and answer period. Mr. Dunn is bringing with him a member of the bureau's staff, Mrs. Catherine Madigan, program specialist for Welfare, Bureau of Economic Development, who will also contribute valuable information. Their program will be illustrated with film.

Mr. Dunn who resides in Camp Hill, Penna., holds an A.B. degree in Psychology and Education from Waynesburg College, and an M.E.D. from the University of Pittsburgh School of Education; he has done extensive post graduate work at the University of Pittsburgh. His background also includes service with the U.S. Air Force, 1951-54, and he has been a high school teacher in Pittsburgh, Alliquippa and Westinghouse Valley Area Schools; high school principal in South Middleton Township Junior-Senior High School; Education Specialist for the Bureau of Economic Development, Penna. Department of Community Affairs; and, in July 1966 was promoted to his present position as assistant director of the bureau.

Mrs. Madigan is a graduate with an A.B. degree in Sociology from the College of St. Francis, Joliet, Ill., and has served as caseworker for Cook County Hospital Mental Health Clinic in Chicago, Ill., and for Ebensburg State School and Hospital. She was director for Project Medicare Alert in Cambria County from February to May 1966, and director of Hornerstown Community Center in Johnstown, Penna., for 1966-67. Mrs. Madigan is now serving as the program specialist for Bureau of Economic Development; she received her appointment in May 1967.

P-SCSG Entertained This Evening At Mrs. Gaden's

The Pre-School Child Study Group will have its second meeting of the season, at 8:30 p.m. this evening, at the home of Mrs. Alan Gaden, 35 Warren boulevard. Mrs. Carolyn Patchen, R.N., from Warren General Hospital will be the speaker. The committee chairman for refreshments will be Mrs. Dennis Patterson, assisted by Mrs. Orren Wood and Mrs. William Stevenson.

The special events committee has been busy making plans for a garage rummage sale to be held on Friday, October 20, from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m., and on Saturday, October 21, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. at 22 Church Street, North Warren. All members are to bring their items for the sale the day before to be sorted.

Also coming up at the end of October will be the children's Halloween party under the chairmanship of Mrs. Gary Wareham. Plans for this event will be made final at this meeting. All members are reminded to bring any unwanted Halloween costumes so they can be given to underprivileged children.

The president, Mrs. Wilbur Swartz, would like all members to bring their orders for identification tags to the meeting, as she is going to send an order in on Tuesday, October 10.

work I had to go to bed for two days when we got home. Loading and unloading camping gear, cooking, dishwashing, fighting insects and listening to animals howl all night is not my idea of relaxation. I would rather stay at home (where I have good plumbing) and work in my garden.

Egbert is sulking now because I have refused to go with him this weekend. Do you feel I should force myself to go just to be a good wife, as he says?—TIERED BONES

DEAR BONES: No. You have been a good wife for 40 years by allowing Egbert to put camping ahead of everything. Now let him be a good husband and respect your need for comfort.

POLIOMYELITIS INCIDENCE

Q. Do cases of polio still occur in the U. S. or has the disease been completely eliminated by vaccination?

A. In 1965, only 64 cases of paralytic polio were reported in the United States. Of 61 victims for whom information was available, 53 had received no oral vaccine and 45 had not received polio injections.

ST. VITUS' DANCE

Q. What is St. Vitus' Dance?

A. St. Vitus' Dance is an old term referring to what is now known as chorea minor. The cause is unknown but about half of afflicted persons develop signs of rheumatic fever. Chorea minor as well as rheumatic fever have become generally less frequent due to use of penicillin prophylactically.

Double Ring Rites Unite
Janet Drake, Donald Scalise

Janet Ann Drake became the bride of Donald L. Scalise on Saturday, October 7, at an 11 o'clock double ring nuptial service in St. George Church in Erie. Father Robert Cohan, assistant at St. James Church in Erie, officiated. Wedding music was furnished by Frank S. Whitaker of Allentown, Pa. and the vocalists were Frank Zigler and Joseph Szoszorek. Baskets of mums and palms decorated the altar.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene C. Drake of 3930 Davenport ave., Erie, and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Scalise, of 12½ Prospect st., Warren.

Approaching the altar on the arm of her father, the bride was gown in silk organza over pelon taffeta with a scalloped Sabrina neckline of Venetian lace and flared elbow length sleeves. Motifs of lace decorated the A-line skirt that flowed to a chapel length. Her veil was of nylon illusion attached to a crown of matched lace decorated with strings of pearls. The bridal bouquet was of white roses centered with yellow sweetheart roses accented with white autumn wheat. She carried a white crystal rosary, a gift of the groom.

Miss Carol Benek of Erie, maid of honor, wore a gown of gold Empress Josephine silhouette of nylon organza over white daisies with a chantilly top and bishop sleeves and taffeta skirt. Her headpiece was of leaf petals with jet veils to match the gown. The bridesmaids were Miss Betty Bar-gielski of Washington, D.C. and Miss Linda Chiaramonte of Erie. Their gowns were Emerald green. Their bouquets were of yellow poms and accented with brown and green autumn wheat.

Best man was Ronald Scalise, brother of the groom, of Columbus, Pa.; ushers for the ceremony were Raymond Scalise of Erie and Dennis Drake, brother of the bride.

The mother of the bride wore a wool knit dress of teal blue. The mother of the groom chose a three piece wool knit suit of deep turquoise blue. Mrs. Ralph Drake, grandmother of the bride, was also present.

The wedding reception was held in the Polish Falcons Club in Erie.

For traveling to New York State, the bride chose a three piece knit suit of turquoise blue. The newlyweds will make their home at 437 King st., Chambersburg, Pa.

The new Mrs. Scalise is a graduate of St. Benedict Academy in Erie and is employed as a secretary at the American Sterilizer Co., Erie. Mr. Scalise has served two years in the U.S. Army and is a graduate of Cathedral Prep in Erie and the American Medical Technologists School in Cleveland, Ohio holding a M.T. Degree in Medical Technology. He is employed on the Medical Staff at the Army Hospital, Letterkenny Army Depot in Chambersburg, Pa.

Pre-nuptial affairs were given by Mrs. Joseph Scalise, Mrs. Ronald Scalise, Miss Elizabeth Beckstett, Miss Marie Dob-meir, Mrs. Joseph Glass, Miss Carol Benek, Miss Linda Bar-gielski and Miss Linda Chiaramonte.

Weaver-Flatt Nuptials Take Place In Epworth Methodist

One hundred fifty guests gathered in the Epworth Methodist Church, Warren, for the wedding of Rosemary Jill Weaver and Gail M. Flatt, on Saturday afternoon, October 7, at 2:30. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Reed Weaver, 40150 st., Warren and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Flatt, 609 Kinzua road, Warren.

The Rev. Samuel Dunning, pastor, read the double ring wedding rites, and the organ music was provided by Mrs. Kent Peterson with Richard Smith the vocal soloist. Two altar vases of white floral arrangements and candelabra ornamented the altar.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white kitten satin gown with empire waist and A-line skirt trimmed with Venetian lace. The bell sleeves and detachable train were trimmed with lace. The gown was made by the mother of the bride. The bridal veil was of fingertip length silk illusion. Her bouquet was of white sweetheart roses and carnation with streamers.

Mrs. James Swanson, matron of honor and sister of the bride, wore a floor length ensemble of emerald green brocade and matching pillbox hat with butterfly veil. She carried dark pink sweetheart roses and light pink carnations. Mrs. Dennis Flatt, sister-in-law of the groom, was dressed identically. The attendants' gowns were made by the mother of the bride.

Dennis Flatt, brother of the groom, served as best man. Reynold Flatt, brother of the groom, and James Swanson, brother-in-law of the bride, ushered.

The mother of the bride chose a two-piece green knit dress with black accessories and a corsage of Sonora sweetheart roses. The mother of the groom wore a three piece knit suit of peacock blue and light pink sweetheart roses. Mrs. Harry Reynolds, grandmother of the groom was remembered with a corsage of light pink carnations.

The wedding reception was held in the church parlors with one hundred fifty guests attending. Aides were Ruth Olson, Miss Debi Jones, Mrs. Jayne Tucker, and Mrs. Margaret Mohr.

For traveling to the southern states, the bride chose a navy blue suit and matching accessories with dark pink sweetheart roses. Upon returning home, the couple will reside at 17 Mason's Mobile City.

Mrs. Flatt is a graduate of Warren High School, class of 1965 and is employed as an

Wake Up Your PERISTALSIS And Be Your SMILING BEST

Peristalsis is the muscular action of your digestive system. When peristaltic action slows down, waste materials can build up in the lower tract. You can become irregular, uncomfortable, stuffed.

The unique laxative formula of today's Carter's Pills gives effective, temporary relief of the irregularity by activating the slowed-down muscles of the lower tract and stimulating peristalsis. So if you're sluggish due to irregularity, take Carter's Pills to wake up your peristalsis and you'll bounce back to your smiling best.

Millions of satisfied users take Carter's Pills for effective temporary relief of irregularity. Why don't you, too.

Penna. Nurses 63rd Meeting In Pittsburgh

Registered nurses from all over the state will convene in Pittsburgh on October 16, to serve as members of the House of Delegates of the Pennsylvania Nurses Association during the association's 63rd annual convention. The week-long meetings at the PennSheraton will set policies and make decisions that will guide the progress of nursing in Pennsylvania. Presiding will be Dr. Lucile S. Young, R.N., of McKeesport, president of the organization.

"There is little doubt that nurses today are faced with an enormous task in terms of developing and adapting nursing techniques to keep pace with the progress of medical care and of the patterns of hospital and public health staffing," says Dr. Young. "The shortcomings in staffing continue to harass the professional nurse who only too frequently finds herself reluctantly forced to compromise high standards of individual patient care in order to meet the needs of an ever-increasing number of patients assigned to her."

"An expanding group of supplementary workers contribute additional 'hands' to the total patient care, but the nurse's responsibility still encompasses the entire patient group, and contemporary medicine demands constant high levels of professional judgment on the part of the nurse, judgment that cannot safely be delegated."

The forthcoming meetings of the association will focus on all aspects of nursing care. Current problems will be discussed, and serious thought and planning will concentrate on meeting the future needs of the profession, and more importantly, the patients it serves. Clinical meetings and technical sessions will help the nurses to maintain their own standards of practice and equip them to keep pace with medical developments.

The election of officers will climax the five-day convention on October 20.

Virginia Lynn Stewart Weds Bruce Holmberg At Calvary

Virginia Lynn Stewart and Bruce Holmberg pledged their wedding vows on Saturday evening, October 7, at 7:30 in Calvary Baptist Church, Pastor A. Wallace Orson read the double ring rites in the presence of approximately one hundred and fifty guests.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Stewart, 5 Crestmont drive, Warren, and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Holmberg of 466 Buchanan street, Warren.

Vases of gladioli, mums and fern adorned the candlelit altar. Family pews were marked with bows of ribbon. Traditional wedding music was provided by Mrs. Margaret Donham at the organ, and Mrs. Myrtle Gent, vocal soloist.

Presented in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor length wedding gown of white satin styled with a molded bodice, natural waistline and long tapering sleeves coming to wedding points. Embroidery, etched with seed pearls, and clusters of crystals with flower appliques of Swiss organza accented the scalloped portrait neckline and the front of the bodice and bell shaped skirt. A pert bow secured the court train which flared out in graceful folds and another bow accented the divided hemline. Her headress was a floor length mantilla of imported French illusion with Alencon lace edging and she carried a bouquet of white and red roses with Stephanotis.

The matron of honor was Mrs. Richard Peterson in a gown of gold crepe with cut velvet and satin contrasts. She wore a matching gold Dior bow head-dress with butterfly veil. Her flowers were bronze and yellow pompons. The bridesmaid, Miss Pam Holmberg, sister of the groom, was costumed identically.

Richard Peterson was the best man, and the groomsmen was Jim Stewart, brother of the bride; ushers were David Holmberg and Dean Backstrom, cousins of the groom.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Stewart wore an aqua two-piece ensemble of silk and worsted with matching flower hat. Mrs. Holmberg, mother of the groom, chose a beige knit linen with brown hat. Both had orchid corsages. Mrs. George Stewart, grandmother of the bride, from Victoria, B.C., Canada, had a pink carnation corsage.

A reception immediately followed in Fellowship Hall of the church. Decorations were carried out in an autumn theme of yellow and bronze flowers; the bride's table was centered with a four tier wedding cake topped with wedding bells and flanked by lighted tapers in candelabra. Aides were Elaine Backstrom, Lucille McKelvey, Phyllis Rydholm, Myrtle Gent, Judy Fredrick, Cindy Strandberg, Karen Wagner, Joyce Rydholm, Donna Gent and Debbie Stewart.

For a wedding trip to Niagara Falls, the new Mrs. Holmberg wore a wool dress of olive green with black accessories and a corsage of yellow roses. Upon their return, Mr. and Mrs. Holmberg, are residing in the new Holly Apartments, Warren.

The bride is employed at Struthers - Wells Corporation, and the groom is presently serving in the United States Navy.

Pre-nuptial affairs were given by Miss Frances Germonto; Miss Pam Holmberg and Mrs. Richard Peterson; Mrs. Oscar Holmberg and her two daughters, Joan and Sandra; Mrs. Myrtle Gent, Mrs. Phyllis Rydholm and Mrs. Lucille McKelvey; Mrs. Mona Orbanic and Miss Susie Robinson. The rehearsal dinner was given by Mr. and Mrs. James Holmberg, parents of the groom.

Out of town guests attended from Victoria, B.C. and Stratford, Ontario, Canada; Jamestown, N.Y.; Pittsburgh and Erie, Penna.

Needlework Guild Begins Work

Mrs. T. L. Armstrong, president of the Needlework Guild, has scheduled the first fall meeting of the directors for Friday afternoon, October 13, at one thirty o'clock at her home, 207 Market street.

At this meeting the directors, thirty in number, will make plans for the solicitation and ingathering of articles of new clothing for distribution by the following six agencies: Warren Relief Association, Family Service and Children's Aid Society, Warren General Hospital, Warren Visiting Nursing Association, Pennsylvania State Nurses' Association, and Warren General Hospital. Representatives from these agencies will attend the meeting and will outline the estimated needs and the desired contributions for the winter season.

In order to allow plenty of time for preparations before the ingathering, which will take place at the Red Cross headquarters on the afternoon of October 26, directors should contact their list of contributors early.

Contributors may leave articles at the YWCA if they are plainly marked with the name of the donor and the name of the director.

GOREN ON BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN
(c 1967 By The Chicago Tribune)
ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q. 1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A63 ♥A10373 ♦97 ♣864
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♦ Pass 1 ♥ Pass
4 ♥ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A—What started out as a colorful bidding battle, the light of partner's vigorous action, blossomed forth into a thing of beauty. Upon reevaluation your hand is worth 10 points at a heart contract. Since partner's bidding indicates about 21, you are in the slam zone. One step is called for and should take the form of a cue bid of four spades.

Q. 2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A4 ♥QJ7 ♦QJ63 ♣AK86
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♠ Dble. 1 NT ?
What do you bid?
A—Double. Assuming partner to be sound, either East or West has exaggerated his values. You have nine points in high cards and partner has at least 13 which gives your side a decided edge in high card strength.

Q. 3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AJ3 ♥K8 ♦QJ65 ♣AQ65
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ 3 ♣ Pass Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A—Pass. Your partner has no strength or he would have doubled West or made a free bid. The opponents assuredly have their signals crossed, and a double by you will only serve to wise them up. West apparently has the rest of the clubs, and from your distribution it is apparent that East's long suit will represent a much better resting spot for his side.

Q. 4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠KJ3763 ♥AJ98 ♦A ♣107
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 2 ♦ Pass 2 ♥ Pass 3 ♦ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A—Things aren't going your way, and it behooves you not to be stubborn. It is true that you have a good rebiddable spade suit, but there is a very grave doubt as to whether you can afford to do any more bidding. If partner doesn't like spades, you may be in very deep water. The better part of valor is to resign yourself to a short loss by passing three diamonds. Incidentally, we would have preferred a rebid of two spades after partner's two diamond bid.

Q. 5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K9742 ♥K103 ♦AJ96 ♣A
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ P s 2 NT Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A—With this somewhat unbalanced hand the door should not be shut to a possible game contract in spades and the suggested call is three diamonds. If partner returns to spades, we would accept that suit as trump. If partner returns to three no trump, we relax.

Q. 6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠42 ♥KJ ♦K63 ♣AKQ962
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ 1 ♣ 1 NT 2 ♥ ?

What do you bid now?
A—Three no trump. Your hand should produce seven or eight tricks and, since you can stop the hearts and partner has indicated that he can take care of the spades, fulfillment of a no trump game should prove routine.

Q. 7—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠62 ♥KQ5 ♦AJ95 ♣1075
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♦ Pass 1 ♥ Pass 3 ♦ Dble. ?

What do you bid now?
A—Four hearts. Do not make the mistake of bidding three no trump. Partner was in position to make that call himself and declined to do so. Showing the heart support at this point will serve to clarify the picture for partner. Since you are giving a delayed raise he will know you have only three card support and will be in a better position to decide on the final contract.

Q. 8—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A976 ♥10976 ♦A3 ♣AK2
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Dble. 2 ♣ Dble. ?

What do you bid now?
A—Pass. A rescue is not to be considered. Had there been a better spot available, partner would not have offered an immediate raise over the double. If his values fit well enough, you may make your contract even against a badly stacked enemy trump holding.

Your Horoscope

By Frances Drake

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars,

FOR MONDAY, OCTOBER 9, 1967

ARIES (March 21 to April 20) — The important thing now will be your approach, both in minor and major issues. And look over your schedule to note if you overlooked something yet uncompleted. Avoid stress and strain.

TAURUS (April 21 to May 21) — When you do a kind deed quietly, you do yourself a favor as well as protect the other person's dignity. This is a forte with Taurus. You may have a chance to exercise this trait now.

GEMINI (May 22 to June 21) — A few spots needing discretion and cooperation. Hold on to your hat and humor; give where it will help, but not unwisely.

CANCER (June 22 to July 23) — Let some of the old show through the new to lend grace, solidarity. Remember what you promised, keep what you can, pay due apology for what you must omit. And don't over-commit yourself next time.

LEO (July 24 to August 23) — This would be a good day to discuss pending matters within the family circle or with business associates. You may be the recipient of some valuable ideas.

VIRGO (August 24 to September 23) — You cannot get "blood from a turnip" nor can you elicit the results you desire from a project that just hasn't reached the productive state. So move temporarily to another chore, position, task; a new viewpoint might help.

LIBRA (September 24 to October 23) — An unshaken faith in your beliefs and constructive principles could be your strongest asset now. Writing, law, agriculture, lipines.

education, home matters need care.

SCORPIO (October 24 to November 23) — You will have your problems if you let your mind wander, or thoughts deviate from duties, wasting precious moments that could be used to clear the way for big returns. SAGITTARIUS (November 24 to December 21) — There's a tendency toward compulsive and undisciplined action now. Take your day in hand promptly, lead with steady, firm reins. Liabilities need not outbalance profits, and all slip-ups CAN be rectified.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20) — With some discreet pushing from you, most things will turn out well. Look for new gains through a co-worker's willingness, your sound treatment of all matters.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19) — Don't let anyone give you ideas which are prejudicial to your interests. Stick to well-tested procedures and maintain your principles.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20) — Day's ordinary tasks should not be put aside for new things that have glitter but don't rate the front line. Anyone can be fooled who wears blinders or rose-colored glasses. Be alert.

YOU BORN TODAY are unusually vigorous and energetic; could excel in industry, statesmanship, medicine; also as a sculptor, artist or actor. You also make a keen critic and speaker; put a touch of originality to everything you say or write. You like people from all walks of life; should have a variety of interesting friends. Protect your resources—mental, physical, monetary. Birthdate of: Miguel de Cervantes, Spanish author; Gen'l. Leonard Wood, former Gov. Gen'l. of the Philippines.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. T. R. Van Dellen

ERADICATING POLLUTION

In a recent issue of The Sciences It was reported that the weight of pollutants spewed into the atmosphere adds up to 142 million tons a year. This is 10 million tons more than the entire 1965 steel production of the United States.

Automobiles and trucks head the list of despoilers. Industries, power plants, and the burning of fuels to heat homes, offices, and apartments contribute their share. Each year every American throws away 1,800 pounds of garbage, paper, and lawn clippings.

Until recently, air pollution has been tolerated as being the price we pay for progress and prosperity. But many people fail to realize how much they personally contribute to this problem. As noted by an NEW deputy chief: "Even if he is an apartment dweller who eats in restaurants, dumps his refuse into a chute and uses public transportation, hardly ever does he consider that power plants operate to support his energy needs, incinerators and public or private dumps dispose of his refuse, factories produce the goods he demands, trucks deliver his necessities and luxuries, and buses take him where he wants to go."

This should not be misconstrued to mean that the cost of air cleanliness should be passed along to the consumer. The citizen can do more by insisting that pollution be stopped at the source or by eliminating that source. An example of the first is to perfect devices that destroy unburned or partially burned hydrocarbons and otherwise escape thru the exhaust pipe of the automobile.

Another is to design better combustion motors. The greater efficiency of the units the more completely they will utilize or consume all materials. The alternate is to eliminate the source—the internal combustion engine.

This means the electric automobile or turbine-powered vehicles.

TOMORROW: Concussion.

Dr. Van Dellen will answer questions on medical topics if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request.

RUPTURED ULCER

K.B. writes: What causes a stomach ulcer to break open? REPLY: Ulcer represents a local area in which the wall of the stomach is being eaten away. When this erosion continues because of too much acidity or overactivity, the crater deepens until it perforates the wall of the stomach. As a result, the contents of the gastric pouch spill into the abdominal cavity. The result is a chemical peritonitis.

NO FEELING IN TOES

P.E.A. writes: Three toes on my right foot and two on my left are numb. Can anything be done about it? REPLY: Numbness may be due to anemia, poor circulation, or neuritis. The distribution of the symptom in your case warrants a thorough examination by a neurologist because a lesion in the spinal cord also induces these symptoms.

RIB SORENESS

K.B. writes: What causes aching ribs? REPLY: Injury is the most common cause. Now and then arthritis affects the joints between the ribs and the breastbone in front, or the spine back. Involvement of the nerves and muscles between the ribs may be the origin of soreness in this area.

Grapes Are Great

In flavor, variety, and instant refreshment nothing matches these juicy fruits, and they're great for salads, fruit cups, preserves or jelly. Family Circle Magazine's October issue contains a picture dictionary of the most popular types, tells where they grow, how to identify them, and what to look for in the best buys. To give them the velvet-glove treatment they deserve, Family Circle suggests handling them lightly and as little as possible. Remove the store wrapper, if there is one, check the grapes, and discard any soft ones. To wash or not to wash before storage seems to remain a question with strong opinion on both sides. Some say it's better to place the grapes in a colander, rinse with a gentle spray of water and dry well, spread the bunches out on a tray so the air can circulate around them, and then place in the refrigerator. The opposition claims moisture speeds spoilage, so you should chill grapes first, then wash them before eating.

Amex Rises; Counter List Also Shows Gain

By ALEXANDER R. HAMMER
Most issues in the over-the-counter market and on the American Stock Exchange moved up last week on moderate volume.
Turnover fell in comparison with that of preceding weeks because of the Jewish High Holy Days, which opened with the observance of Rosh ha-Shanah late Wednesday.
Analysts attributed the improved performance of both markets to several bullish business developments. These included an increase in new automobile sales in the final 10 days of September, gains in retail store sales and further increases in steel product prices. They noted that factors limiting the advance were uncertainty over a possible tax rise and the results of third-quarter earnings of corporations, which are due shortly.

The over-the-counter market moved in a narrow price range until Wednesday, when stepped-up buying buoyed most issues. Further gains were made during the remainder of the week.
As a result, the National Quotation Bureau's index of 35 industrial stocks ended on Friday at a new high of 345.55, up 4 points from the level on the preceding Friday.
The American Stock Exchange's index of stock prices also ended the week with gains. At week's end, the index stood at $23.11, up 36 cents.
Turnover on the Amex tapered off, with volume for the week amounting to 26,110,665 shares, compared with 29,539,600 shares the week before.
One of the bigger movers in the over-the-counter market was A.I.T.S. (American International Travel Services), which soared 14 1/2 points on strong volume. The four operator last week signed a $13-million contract with Trans International Airlines that provides for package tours for more than 100,000 persons to Hawaii in the next 19 months. Supplementary contracts amounting to an additional $17-million were also signed by the two companies.
Midas International moved ahead 2 1/2 after the company announced that it expected a 20 per cent rise profits this year.
An increase in profits in the nine months ended July 31 to 98 cents a share, from 81 cents a share in the period last year helped move the Shatterproof Glass Company up 2 points.
On the downside, Pabst Brewing lost 5 points after the company made a secondary distribution of 50,000 common shares.
News that Wyandotte Chemical's profits for 1967 would decline from the level in the preceding year, when the company netted $2.74 a share, sent the stock down 2 1/4 in active trading.
Another loser was Memorex, a high-priced stock, which dropped 16 points on profit taking. First Boston and Chicago Bridge each dipped 3 and the Potash Company of America slipped 2 1/2.
Most bank stocks made good gains on news that their earnings for the September quarter were up considerably. Morgan Guaranty tacked on 3; First National City added 1 1/2 and Chemical was up 1 1/4.

THE WEEK IN FINANCE

Wall Street Feels Tremors of Fear That Severe Inflation is Imminent

By THOMAS E. MULLANEY
Fear of severe inflation sent tremors of concern through Wall Street last week.
They were manifest in two ways. On one hand, some investors showed no hesitation over paying the highest prices in history for growth stocks. At the same time, tension was rising in the bond market, where prices withered steadily and interest rates soared to their loftiest levels since the Great Depression.
As a result, a mantle of gloom has cloaked the financial community. The cause, clearly, is widespread nervousness over spreading inflationary pressures and the dollar's erosion.
Wall Street's worries were accentuated by the surprisingly decisive move in the House Ways and Means Committee last Tuesday that deferred consideration of the Administration's tax bill in an effort to force an agreement between the President and Congress on a program for reducing Federal spending.
Washington was continuing to fiddle while the fires of inflation were gaining intensity.
Price and wage increases were ripping out in an ever-widening arc; interest rates were moving inexorably upward despite the continued easy-money policy; and demand pressures in the economy, sparked by the sharp revival in consumer greater strength.
One of the most heartening, and, at the same time, most frightening -- recent statistics from the business world was last week's figures on auto sales for September.
The month's sharp gain of 9 per cent depicted an economy that had thoroughly shaken its springtime sniffling and returned to a state of excellent health -- perhaps too robust.

The situation obviously calls for dramatic action and compromise, but none seemed to be in the offing late last week as the financial markets closed on a nervous note.
More than anything else, the present stalemate over the tax bill requires prompt and forceful initiative from the White House to get things untracked.
Two things are required, in the view of the Administration's most vocal critics -- a program of spending reductions even before Congress completes work on appropriations and a campaign by the President to convince the public of the need for higher taxes.
It may well be, as Administration officials contend, that there is no room for the $5-billion in budget cuts that some members of Congress have been seeking, but it should be possible to trim a few billions from Federal outlays in post-construction and other nondefense, nonurgent programs. In last fall's inflationary atmosphere, the Administration did impound some funds in the construction and mortgage areas.
There was one hopeful omen in the Defense Department's announcement late in the week that it was freezing some $350-million in military building projects.
There are certainly many other such projects that could be put on the shelf to ease the budget stringency -- and convince Congress it should get moving promptly on the tax bill.
For its part, the Legislature should be doing some economizing, too, so that the full burden of proposing perhaps unpopular spending cuts does not fall on the Executive Branch.
As the fourth quarter begins, advocates of higher taxes are sounding a note of urgency that Congress shed its seemingly casual attitude on taxes.
Day by day, the economy seems to be moving strongly upward at a rate that could become excessive in these final three months of the year -- the period of normally heaviest business activity.
It appears now that the nation's gross national product rose by an annual rate of some $15-billion in the quarter just ended, despite the $2-billion drag caused by the continuing strike at the Ford Motor Company that began on Sept. 6.
The gain was also achieved without the help of any significant accumulation of inventories by business after a record post-war depletion of some $18-billion between the fourth quarter of last year and mid-1967.

The inventory correction is probably a thing of the past. It may well give way to a new buildup in the current quarter.
If consumers continue to spend as freely as they have in the last three months -- which doesn't seem implausible -- and personal income continues its sharp upward curve as expected in the light of continuing wage and salary increases, a new period of inventory accumulation will certainly get underway. Manufacturers and retailers will be unwilling to risk lost sales in the big sales season ahead.
Place inventory accumulation on top of gains in personal income, industrial production, housing outlays, consumer expenditures and business capital spending and it adds up to an economy moving too fast.
With unemployment at its low 3.8 per cent rate and plant utilization not significantly below the optimum 90-91 per cent operating rate, it is difficult to see how a fourth-quarter gain of perhaps $20-billion in gross national product can be produced without severe strains and an unchanged price level.
Nevertheless the strongest case for a tax increase lies in the financial markets, where the pressures are constantly mounting.
Without a tax rise, the markets could be confronted with overly burdensome interest levels as the Treasury seeks to finance its huge deficit through heavy sales of securities.
Some analysts have even predicted long-term interest rates in the 7 to 8 per cent band and short-term rates at the 6 per cent level, or higher.
Last Thursday, the Bond Buyer's index of tax-exempt municipal bond yields reached 4.25 per cent, up from 4.19 per cent the week before and just above the 4.24 per cent peak in last year's credit squeeze late in August and early in September.
The latest level was the highest in a third of a century -- or since May 1, 1934, when the index stood at 4.27 per cent. In those days, though, tax-exemption was not quite the advantage to investors that it is at present.
Meanwhile, by midweek, Moody's average yield for triple-A corporate bonds had risen to 5.72 per cent, a high for this year so far and 10 basis points above the peak in the 1966 credit crunch.

At the same time, Standard & Poor's 500-stock index showed an average yield of only 3.04 per cent -- indicating that bonds, in general, are yielding 2.68 points more than stocks, the widest divergence in history.
This might soon be reflected in a tendency of investors to shift out of stocks and into bonds in more significant numbers.
There certainly is no disputing the fact that nothing puts a greater strain on a nation's economy than inflation -- and the dose of it that now looms threatens to require credit controls (and perhaps wage and price curbs) that would hurt every one.
Ordinarily the prospect of inflation, in small doses, tends to help stocks. However, the professionals are beginning to give consideration to the unfavorable aspects of inflation and the dangers of severe inflation, which Goodbody & Co. succinctly outlined as "the rising cost of money and credit, the increasing prospect of monetary restraint, the possibility of tighter controls, including stock margin requirements, and the pressures that rising costs are likely to place on corporate profit margins."
While many professional investors are becoming wary of the inflationary danger and its potential impact on the stock market, the investing public has not yet begun to show the same measure of concern.
This has led some security analysts to conclude the market may well proceed to greater heights this year, with the blue-chip averages perhaps surpassing the record levels posted early in 1966, before any severe reaction materializes.
The stock market as a whole made little headway last week, although glamour stocks and special situations were strong and active.
The final tally showed a close balance between advances and declines, with 759 stocks up and 705 down, and the market averages ended with small changes.
The Dow-Jones industrial index closed with a net gain of 2.08 points at 925.74. The New York Times combined average of 50 stocks showed a loss of 0.93 at 54.238, but Standard & Poor's 500-stock index rose 0.35, to 97.26.
Trading on the New York Stock Exchange, affected to some extent by the Jewish holy days and the start of baseball's World Series, showed a loss of 49.4 million shares for the week, against 50.8 million the week before. Nevertheless, on Thursday, the year's volume surpassed the record turnover of 1,999,495,014 shares traded in all of 1966.
The week's most active issue was Amphenol on a turnover of 1,042,500 shares. It rose 5 1/4, to 43 1/4. Other active stocks were: Hupp, up 3/4; El Paso Natural Gas, up 2 3/4; International Paper, up 1 3/4, and Scott Paper, up 4 1/4.

Peugeot Sales Up
NEW YORK — Peugeot announced on October 2nd the best month for retail sales of the Peugeot automobiles since 1959. Sales are up 110 per cent for September, 1967 over September of last year. This increase does not include 1968 sales from the nine western states, since the new models were not announced until September 28th in that area.

Renault Marks Sales Increases
NEW YORK — Renault, Inc. announced last week that U.S. retail sales of Renaults were up again for the month of September -- marking the 13th consecutive month of sales increases in the U.S. for the French-based automotive firm.
The September retail sales figure of 1798 units shows a rise of 21.7 per cent over the same month in 1966, at which time Renault introduced the new Renault 10 to the American market. This brings the year-to-date total to 15,101 units, an increase of 76.2 per cent over the same period a year earlier.
On the eve of the debut of the 1968 Renault 10, a retrospective glance at the 1967 model year provides evidence of a Quality Product in conjunction with continued efforts aimed at Quality Service offered by the Renault national network.
The 1968 Renault 10 will be available to the American public on October 11th.

YOU'VE HEARD OF THE HOUSE

ELECTRICITY CAN HEAT

"FOR $9.00 MORE A MONTH"?

~~$15.00~~
~~$8.00~~
~~$7.50~~

Just as the electric people say—you can heat electrically for about $9.00 more a month (or $10.00 or $7.50, or whatever) more than you'd pay for Gas. Provided you're not heating anything much bigger than a doll house. And if you don't want a heated basement. And if you seal the place up like a vacuum bottle.

But if you live in a real house, be realistic. It costs up to three times as much to heat with electricity as with Gas. Electric heat can cost you thousands of dollars more over the life of your mortgage.

Next time you're building, buying, or renting, think about that. Then think of all the things you can do with the money you save with Gas.

Storage Plan in Work Area Helps Cut Labors

Here's an easy home-improvement job for someone who wants to get maximum performance out of her new washer-and-dryer set.

While automatic washers and gas dryers have eliminated most of the effort of soaking, scrubbing, rinsing and hauling the family laundry, most homemakers still waste a lot of motion and effort in sorting the clothes before washing and stacking them after drying, the Gas Appliance Manufacturers Association observes.

One solution to this is offered here by GAMA in the form of a plan to better organize the laundry work area.

You can buy a black metal adjustable shelf. A good size would be 36 inches wide by 40 inches high by 12 inches deep. This would provide three shelves on which you can place bins, boxes, or baskets. The shelves, by the way, are available in standard sizes at most office supply stores. You can buy different colored fiberboard boxes to fill the shelves, or assemble a set of matching fiberboard boxes from a local variety of liquor store and use them in varied colors. Or use cardboard boxes in the same color as the shelves.

Sorting Guide

Put a look at the dialing guide, or on your washing and drying machines and refer to the instruction manuals for help. Using an ink felt pen, mark out nine categories on the dialing guide. Describe the daily sorting of clothes and laundry in your home. You may want to use clothing — TYPE labels like "white", "brightly colored", "white lingerie", or you may favor MACHINE-DIAL labels such as "wash 'n wear", "normal", "damp dry" or "regular fabrics."

With this sort of arrangement you don't have to go through the agonies of "sorting decisions" every day or worry about how many different washing or drying loads you'll need to do. Fabrics that need special treatment go into their assigned position on the shelf. You won't have to bother with this category, either, until you feel you have a load worth putting into the machine.

To complete your organization of a practical utility area, all you need is a work surface where you can conveniently rest a laundry basket, handle or sort clothes, or stretch and block sweaters and socks.

Buy a piece of plywood 36 inches wide and 15 inches deep. Paint it black, to match the metal shelves, or any one of a variety of colors to match the sorting boxes on the shelves. Center the plywood board on top of the shelf cabinet and permanently affix the board to the cabinet.

You then would have a storage cabinet and work surface in one compact unit.

Good Location

Clothes drying racks should be placed in a well-ventilated area, such as a laundry room, because there's a fire hazard. If you have an outdoor line, make sure the rack hanging clothes is secure and away from the house.

Work on a Plan

Some homemakers who wouldn't dream of letting the sun face rugs or furniture hang their good clothes on a line to fade and dry it to sun and wind. Simple solution: get an automatic dryer.

A New Gas Dryer Makes Laundering a Minor Job

A drum certainly is a musical instrument, but you can enjoy it for only so long. Eventually, you're going to want to hear some brass or woodwinds so that the rhythm and melody complement each other.

The same holds true in laundering, says the Gas Appliance Manufacturers Association. It's fine to have a washer, but to really harmonize your waltz through washday you also need a gas clothes dryer.

And ironing, which has been labeled by homemakers as one of their most discordant chores, is greatly reduced with gas dryer drying.

Almost 5,000,000 American families have joined the gas dryer bandwagon. GAMA reports that 707,000 units were purchased last year, and new record sales have been predicted for 1968.

MANY ADVANTAGES

There are many reasons why a gas dryer can change your laundry chores from a ponderous strain to a cheerful little earful:

-You no longer need to make that weighty march to the clothes-line with a hamper of wet wash.

-You can ignore stormy weather and dry your wash indoors any time.

-You'll have more time for activities more gratifying than keeping your family's clothes and linens fresh.

-You can be assured your wash is both cleaner and more germ-free.

-You'll save money on linens and extra clothes, especially for growing children, because with a gas dryer you can have available clothes dry and ready for wear more often.

-Your family's clothing will last longer, because gas dryer drying eliminates the damages of sun fading, wind, soot, dust and clothespin pinching. Also prevented are the nuisances of neighborhood pets and errant birds and insects.

Your waltz through washday will be a minor work for additional reasons. If you own a gas dryer, says GAMA, the troublesome lint often left in washing is removed by the gas dryer.

CUT CLEANING BILL

Blankets, curtains, drapes and small rugs can be tumbled to remove dust and odors and restore resilience and thereby cut down on your dry cleaning costs.

Some new gas dryers are equipped with heat or moisture-sensing devices that automatically "feel" when the clothes are exactly the way you wish, either totally dry or damp dry, for the articles that require ironing.

And if you're really squeezed for space in your home, there are combination washer-gas dryers as little as 27 inches wide.

All dryers and the combination models are available in LP-gas models, if you live beyond city gas mains.

If your waltz through washday is really an untimely symphony, GAMA says, a gas dryer will provide the full score.

Two innovations in gas clothes dryers promise to make this

Now Possible To Shrink Painful Hemorrhoids

And Promptly Stop The Itching, Relieve Pain In Most Cases.

New York, N.Y. (Special): Science has found a medication with the ability, in most cases — to promptly stop itching, relieve pain and actually shrink hemorrhoids.

Tests by doctors proved that in case after case, while gently relieving pain, actual reduction widely used appliance more of a labor-saver than ever. The new features prevent over-drying of clothes.

According to Harold Massey, managing director of the Gas Appliance Manufacturers Association, the two new systems of drying are quite different in operation, but accomplish the same purpose. Both shut off the dryer when a certain percentage of moisture has been removed from the clothes. This means that some moisture is retained to make clothes soft and fibers more elastic.

One system automatically measures the drop in air temperature as it passes through the wet clothes. This determines the rate of evaporation taking place in the dryer drum. It also allows the control to accurately calculate the drying period of any given load. Heat is reduced gradually as clothes become dry and at the critical moment the control shuts off the dryer.

The other system is electronic, the GAMA official explained. A moisture sensing element on each of three baffles attached inside the revolving drum measures the moisture on the clothes. When the proper degree of drying is reached, the gas dryer shuts off automatically.

According to Massey, both systems will prevent the harsh coarse texture and deep-set wrinkles that are characteristic of over-drying. He pointed out that home economists with the Gas Appliance Manufacturers Association recommend that clothes be removed from the dryer the minute the dryer stops, as this also reduces wrinkling.

The Ten Commandments are known as the Decalogue.

The Big Buy

A three-line classified
want ad.

It cost Times-Mirror and Observer advertisers $3.00 for this ad on the 7 time person-to-person rate.

It's not very big in size.
It's not very imposing. And it doesn't cost very much as you can see. In fact, it looks pretty lonesome up there all by itself. But look at it this way.

What you get when you buy a 3-line ad in the Times-Mirror and Observer is not just a single ad on one of the want ad pages.
You've actually bought 13,000 copies of your 3-line
ad. And the price includes personal delivery of each copy to the reader's doorstep.

Just imagine the cost of reaching all those Times-Mirror and Observer families by post card. Why, the postage alone would be $520. But the Times-Mirror and Observer does the job for you for less than 80c per day. (Only $3.00 for 7 time person-to-person want ad).

So you can see this little want ad is a really pretty BIG buy.

5 LEGAL NOTICES

PUBLIC HEARING
Commonwealth of Pennsylvania
Department of Highways

Notice is hereby given that the Department of Highways of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania will, pursuant to Section 128,
Title 23, U.S. Code, hold a public hearing on October 24, 1967, at 10:00 A.M., in the auditorium of the Warren Area High School,
Warren, Pennsylvania.

The purpose of the hearing is to determine the economic effect on communities affected by the construction of Legislative Routes 1094 and 209, Warren Bypass, Warren County, which will consist of two projects.

Project No. 1 will provide a bypass for the Borough of Warren on Traffic Route 6. This bypass will extend from the Village of Starbrick, west of Warren, southeastwardly to a point near Rogertown, east of Warren.

Project No. 2 will begin at the terminal point of the Warren Bypass at Rogertown and extend in an easterly direction to a point west of the Kinzua Dam.
This project will be a relocation of Legislative Route 209,
Traffic Route 59.

Plans are available and can be viewed in the District Office of the Pennsylvania Department of Highways, Franklin, Pennsylvania, between the hours of 8:30 A.M. and 5:00
P.M., Monday through Friday, from now until the date of hearing.

All persons interested in the construction of these sections of highway are invited to appear and express their views.

Robert G. Bartlett,
Secretary of Highways
Oct. 9, 16, 1967 2t.

IS A DANGER TO EVERYONE

Volunteer fire departments in Warren County were organized for the purpose of fire protection for the many residents, businesses and industries of the County. Although records of the past are incomplete, facts show some of the County's departments were formed in the 1880's. The first companies were formed with hand-drawn carts for hose and ladders usually facing the problem of insufficient water. Later horse power was harnessed for the carts until the 1930's when motorized equipment was introduced, now up-dated with self-contained water tanks in many units.

In the late 1940's, chiefs of all the departments held meetings to discuss mutual problems eventually expanding to include full department representation where films and speakers are introduced monthly for educational purposes. The present Constitution and By-laws of the Warren County Active Volunteer Firemen's Association are dated May 18, 1951 with the following purposes stated: to render mutual aid to companies represented in the organization and to study ideas and promote activities that are beneficial to fighting fires in the area represented by the organization. Membership shall consist of all active Volunteer Fire Departments of Warren County having motorized apparatus that desire to belong and are willing to work for the interest of the Association.

Departments in Warren County represented by the Association are Bear Lake, Columbus, Clarendon, Garland, Glade, Lander, North Warren, Pleasant, Russell, Scandia, Sheffield, Spring Creek, Starbrick, Sugar Grove, Tidioute, Wrightsville and Youngsville. The Kinzua and Corydon Departments have been made inactive by the construction of the Kinzua Dam and Reservoir.

Auxiliaries have been formed within each department working co-operatively in social and fund-raising activities. Officials of the County, boroughs and townships budget funds annually to assist with equipment purchases. An inventory of equipment for each department along with dollar value estimates represented in the buildings would be a large figure but the many hours of volunteer work can never be calculated.

The association is appreciative of a cooperating Civil Defense organization in our County where matching funds have been made available from time to time for the installation of radio communications. The County Commissioners have likewise cooperated in furnishing funds for our base station and selective call system for activating fire sirens in any County Department. The Warren Fire Department, the only paid unit of the County, provides a very important part of this program by housing and operating base operations at the Central Fire Station. Air raid alerts are also coordinated with this radio equipment. Radiological equipment has been made available to those departments desiring to take part in this program. The Pennsylvania Department of Forests and Waters provide equipment for fires of that category. The Warren County Sheriff heads a coordinated plan for handling lost persons. A member of the Pennsylvania State Police force is assigned as state fire marshal with the chiefs of each department serving as fire marshal for the geographical areas.

The Warren County Association is associated with the Northwestern Division of the Pennsylvania Firemen's Association. Each department of the Association is incorporated in a Relief Association which receives a two per cent refund on insurance premiums from insurance companies whose home office is outside of Pennsylvania. These funds are strictly regulated by the State Auditor General's Department.
